Energy Security & Powering AI | Asia Pacific

On the Ground with C-Suites

Our first leg of energy and powering AI discussions with C-suites raises our conviction in an energy super-cycle. This means significant upside risks to oil, chemical, and power margins as all markets tighten a lot more than the Street is building in.

On the first leg of our energy security and powering AI trip, we met with power and energy companies in Thailand, which hosts amongst the largest energy hubs in Southeast Asia. YTD, Thai energy and power equities have outperformed the domestic market by 40ppt and the MSCI World Energy Index by 23ppt. The companies have invested ~US$113bn in the past decade and are key to global diesel markets, powering AI, and energy security for Southeast Asia and Japan. We met with integrated/power players – the CEO of Gulf Development and CFO of PTT; refiners – the CFO of Thai Oil, CEOs of Bangchak and Star Petroleum; chemical players – directors at Indorama Ventures, CFOs of Siam Cement and PTT Global Chemicals. We also visited the gas power plant and fuel refinery in Eastern Thailand.

Commodity trading to protect against price volatility for LNG, oil and crude products to reduce the margin drag from timing of feedstock sourcing and sale of products. Energy companies across segments will be expanding their trading operations.

Policy overhang is less of a challenge for all the CEOs – they see the recent windfall tax on diesel as transitory; it actually helps support long-term consumption of fuel. All C-suite leaders highlighted that policymakers are taking a very pragmatic approach to the current energy shock and would step back in once there re limited worries about energy security. See Energy Meets Compute: Supercycle Recharges

Powering AI: Thailand has attracted US$25bn+ of investments in intelligence infrastructure to serve Asian and global needs of both US and China hyperscalers. The hyperscalers are looking to sign fuel costs plus power supply agreements and underwrite new LNG power capacity. See More Power to AI.

Crude oil and diesel: While crude prices have averaged US$100/bbl during the Iran conflict, fuel prices – which are what consumers gauge – have tested new highs consistently closer to US$180-200/bbl. Thailand has managed the availability of crude challenges a lot better than most EMs. It has invested in building fuel and chemical infrastructure and is now moving aggressively to open new exploration areas in Northern Thailand and offshore Andaman to boost domestic oil and gas production. Thailand has nearly halved its crude sourcing and its flexible refinery infrastructure has supported expansion of its crude diet. See here.

What to own: We prefer fuel refiners, power generation players, petrochemicals and coal producers over our industrials coverage. Thai Oil, PTT Global Chemicals, Siam Cement, Gulf Development, and Star Petroleum are our key picks in Thailand. See here.

STOCK RATINGS

Morgan Stanley uses a relative rating system using terms such as Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated or Underweight (see definitions below). Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold and sell. Investors should carefully read the definitions of all ratings used in Morgan Stanley Research. In addition, since Morgan Stanley Research contains more complete information concerning the analyst's views, investors should carefully read Morgan

Stanley Research, in its entirety, and not infer the contents from the rating alone. In any case, ratings (or research) should not be used or relied upon as investment advice. An investor's decision to buy or sell a stock should depend on individual circumstances (such as the investor's existing holdings) and other considerations.

Global Stock Ratings Distribution
