

EM WEEKLY KICKSTART

MSCI EM gained 3% w/w led by rebound in Korea; FII flows turned positive after 7 weeks; 2Q EPS season remains robust; Median 2Q profits up 17% yoy; Brazil underperformance in focus

- Performance: MSCI EM gained 2.7% w/w led by AI-exposed North Asia (Korea: +13%, Taiwan: +3%), while Brazil (-4%), South Africa (-3%) and China (-3%) lagged.
- Earnings/valuations: MXEF is trading at 10.1x fwd. P/E (-2 s.d, 10yr avg). EM 2026E EPS revised +0.4% w/w.
- Flows: EM equities saw foreign inflows of US$8.4bn led by Taiwan (US$5.4bn), Korea (US$4.2bn) and India (US$0.2bn).

Focus: 2Q Earnings Remain Robust

- With over 550 companies and 75% of MSCI EM market cap having reported, 2Q earnings continue to be revised higher — tracking at 91% yoy vs 64% expected at the start of the season. 2Q EPS (yoy) continues to inch higher vs the start of the season across EM regions, across Asia (North Asia, China, India), EM Europe (Poland, Hungary, and select MENA markets), and LatAM (Colombia, Chile, Brazil).
- Overall, the median EM growth in 2Q is tracking at 17% yoy (vs 11% yoy at the start of the season), with a positive median earnings surprise (+2%). The median earnings surprise is positive in most regions, notably

MENA (+7%) and North Asia (+7%). At the aggregate level, beats have continued to outpace misses for both earnings (46% companies beat vs 33% missed) and sales (44% beats vs 15% misses). Earnings season continues to improve for MSCI EM – overall 2026 EPS has been revised up ~7% since June.

Focus: Brazil Underperformance

- MSCI Brazil has corrected ~8% in August and ~18% since YTD highs in mid-April. Rate-sensitive sectors have lagged, but Banks have contributed more to the underperformance recently. While higher long-end rates have weighed on equities per our macro model, the recent underperformance has exceeded typical macro relationships. With Presidential election campaigns kicking off officially this weekend following final candidate registrations on Aug 15, political developments will be a key focus. Compared to past election cycles, currently low implied volatility has the potential to pick up. Brazilian equities have had wide dispersion in outcomes in prior election cycles.

We will pause publication of the EM Kickstart for the rest of August, and will resume in September.
