Industrial companies are navigating the environment well

This note provides our detailed third-quarter outlook for 32 of the 40 companies in our Multi-Industry coverage universe. Despite significant macroeconomic volatility and rising oil prices, we expect estimates to move higher for nearly the entire group. Demand remains resilient, and most companies are offsetting new cost pressures through productivity gains and pricing. We also expect tariff refunds to support profit margins. Many diversified industrial companies buy and assemble semifinished goods, so changes in raw-material costs typically affect results with a lag. Risks remain, but we have maintained or raised estimates for 75% of the companies previewed in this note.

Underlying growth is accelerating

We estimate average organic growth of 10% across our coverage universe. That is consistent with 2Q growth, but represents a 100-basis-point acceleration on a two-year stacked basis, suggesting growth is holding steady despite more difficult comparisons. Growth at companies with limited exposure to data-center construction is holding at 5%, compared with 2% at this time last year. We also see no evidence of slowing fundamentals among companies exposed to AI-related industrials. While the path is unlikely to be linear, we believe the underlying capital-spending cycle remains in its early stages and has substantial room to run.

Company-specific call outs

We have several company-specific takeaways from our work. Below is a high-level summary; the full note includes more detailed views.

- Where we are most positive: JCI and EMR will both provide fiscal 2027 guidance, which we expect will be positive catalysts for shares. We are also positive on IR heading into results: we expect a strong margin inflection and, for the first time in several years, a counter-seasonal 2H book-to-bill ratio above 1x. Other positive company-specific call-outs include FAST (we expect year-over-year EBIT margin improvement though we remain Neutral), MOD (30% sequential increase in data-center revenue), ETN (high-end guidance would imply better 4Q results), PH (acceleration in trailing-twelve-month orders), VRT (significant 3Q growth inflection), FLS (organic growth accelerating to the high single digits in 4Q, versus negative growth in 1H), and NVT (upside to forecasts and healthy order intake).
- Where we are more balanced heading into earnings: We expect MMM's results to be broadly in line with expectations. The company is doing an exemplary job of offsetting cost pressures through higher productivity, but we do not expect 3Q results to drive meaningful revisions in either direction. We also see a balanced set up for DOV: solid growth is partly offset by moderate incremental margins, and we expect book-to-bill to be below 1x, as is typical in 3Q. Finally, we see a balanced set up for companies exposed to residential HVAC markets (CARR, LII, and TT), where near-term cost pressures from steel and aluminum could limit margin expansion. We see a favorable return to growth for these companies in 2027; our near-term view reflects only current conditions.
- Where we are more cautious heading into earnings: We are furthest below consensus for SPXC. We remain positive on the company's medium- to long-term prospects, but believe its 2H margin ramp is at risk from incremental supply-chain costs. Supply-chain and cost-inflation concerns have received significant attention. We do not see broad read-through implications from SPXC, but stretched supply chains, driven by strong demand, remain a key item to monitor.

This note provides our detailed third-quarter outlook for 32 of the 40 companies in our Multi-Industry coverage universe. Despite significant macroeconomic volatility and rising oil prices, we expect estimates to move higher for nearly the entire group. Demand remains resilient, and most companies are offsetting new cost pressures through productivity gains and pricing. We also expect tariff refunds to support profit margins. Many diversified industrial companies buy and assemble semifinished goods, so changes in raw-material costs typically affect results with a lag. Risks remain, but we have maintained or raised estimates for 75% of the companies previewed in this note.

Below we provide a brief company-by-company summary.

AOS- We forecast another subdued quarter for AOS, with full year earnings likely towards the lower end of the guide. We expect third quarter earnings decline to be modestly worse sequentially and model 3Q EPS 1% below consensus. This is driven by a step down in North America organic sales growth and continued weakness in China in 3Q. While these trends should improve into 4Q, we see incremental headwinds from rising material and freight costs into year end. Importantly, we look for updates for China business in the quarter which we expect could be low to mid single digit dilutive to earnings.

- For the third quarter, we model 89c EPS, 1% below consensus. We expect North America organic sales growth to decelerate driven by both price and volume. Announced pricing increases only became effective midway through the quarter, limiting the near term benefit, while volumes would see headwinds from pre-buy activity that occurred in 2Q ahead of those increases. We continue to expect growth to improve in 4Q as pricing is fully realized and volume trends normalize, but we see incremental risk from higher material and freight costs. Within Rest of World, we expect revenue trends to remain weak, broadly consistent with the last quarter, although growth rates should improve on easier comparisons. We forecast segment margin to recover sequentially to 6% in 3Q.
- The other key focus in the quarter would be China business strategic review update. Management has indicated it expects to provide an update by Q3 results. Assuming a sale, we believe the transaction could be low to mid single digit dilutive to EPS. Here, we assume 4-6x multiple on China business earnings, which accounts for 90% of Rest of World segment profit and using proceeds for share repurchases. While modestly dilutive financially, this could remove an overhang, and increase strategic focus on the most profitable parts of the business.

CARR- We expect 3Q results to highlight incremental cost pressure despite better volume trends. While these cost headwinds should continue to weigh on earnings in the near term, we see a more constructive set up in 2027 with stabilizing resi markets and sustained strength in data centers. With shares trading at 16x our 2027E EPS, or 1 std below historical mean, we believe risk/reward is attractive for the stock about the recent bout of underperformance, with limited downside from the current levels. We also note that positioning felt overwhelmingly positive earlier this year from our conversations, which likely exacerbated the recent underperformance.

- For the quarter, we model $0.77 EPS, largely in line with the consensus. Our assumptions include 13% organic sales growth and 16.5% operating margin in the quarter. Organic sales growth in Q3 should be led by 25% growth in Climate Solutions Americas, reflecting strong double digit growth for resi on easier comps and strength in the commercial business due to data centers. Despite a strong top line, our model implies margin 50 bps below company's guidance due to incremental inflationary pressure across the businesses. In addition, ongoing data center related investments and ramp costs are likely to continue to impact margins this year.
- For 2027, we model $3.42 EPS, 4% ahead of consensus. Our forecasts assume 8% organic sales growth and 110 bps year over year margin expansion. This implies 33% incremental margin which is supported by volume incremental and absence of absorption headwind in 2026. We model 11% organic sales growth in Climate Americas driven by double digit% growth in Commercial and mid to high single digit growth across resi and light commercial businesses.

CGNX- We believe the set up for Cognex remains constructive heading into 3Q following the recent share price underperformance tied to the RealSense acquisition. In our view, the market reaction has been excessive, with the company losing $0.5 billion of market cap on a deal of similar size. Operationally, we continue to see healthy momentum across the machine vision market, which should support Cognex results toward the high end of guidance range. We model a sequential decline in gross margin, driven by 75 bps memory cost and mix headwinds. However, this should be largely offset by lower SG&A and R&D spending. Beyond memory, we don't expect any incremental headwinds from inflationary pressures which the company is managing actively. Looking ahead, we model 4Q EPS of $0.40, 3% above consensus. This includes 12% organic revenue growth and incremental margin above 90% as operating expenses continue to step down sequentially. We also expect memory cost pressures to begin easing in 4Q, supported by incremental pricing actions.

CR- We model a 4% EPS beat ($1.86 vs $1.79), mainly driven by stronger operating margin performance across both segments (PFT & AAT). We previously took our FY EPS estimate to $7.10 which is slightly above the high end of the company's guidance and Consensus. We think PFT revenue and orders can return to growth in the quarter.

- Underpinning the stronger margin performance, we think total company margins segments should tick up sequentially, partly on higher sequential revenues and also continued integration of the PSI acquisition. Within PFT, chemicals related revenue typically carries higher margin, and we expect to see modest positive growth year over year in the segment as the comparisons ease. In regard to incremental cost inflation, we expect that to be largely offset via pricing and productivity. We would also note that within AAT, commercial aftermarket could be down year over year in the quarter due to a difficult year over year comparison, reflecting comping against initial provisioning last year that was a one-time positive benefit (we estimate about $6-7 million). Additionally, with the acquisition of Trillium, which is expected to close in 4Q, we think the asset has the potential to be accretive to EPS in the first year and will have a negligible impact on net leverage levels.
- Estimates PT changes: We previously raised our 2026 and 2027 EPS estimates by 1.5% each, and we are also maintaining our price target of $240.

DOV- We expect a neutral set up into DOV's 3Q results. We think growth is coming in as expected but forecast incremental margins to step down a bit after 2Q's very strong results (we expect CST margins to be flat sequentially but improve year over year starting in 4Q on facility consolidation). The company is executing well despite meaningful materials/metals inflation. Most of the company's copper exposure is pass-through, so we don't expect negative price/cost in the quarter. Excluding the company's Climate Sustainability Technologies (CST) segment, trailing 12 month orders are largely consistent with trailing 12 months revenue growth, so we're not expecting meaningful broad-based acceleration in organic growth beyond the mid-single digit level. We do see opportunity for growth to step up in 2027 due to easier comps (vehicle lift and MAAG), but magnitude of acceleration will depend on orders from here.

ESAB- We think that the near-term outlook for shares remains challenging, but improving growth trends and a low valuation keep us positive on the 12-month outlook. There are headwinds from the Middle East and parts of the Americas businesses, but ESAB's overall volume trends are improving. At the same time, we think that consensus expectations for 2H margins are too high. Beyond the near term, the combination of improving volume trends and incremental price should allow ESAB to exit this year with mid single digit organic sales growth, which relative to its 11x NTM P/E appears to be undervalued.

- Details on our model: We model 3Q EPS of $1.33, below consensus of about $1.35, assuming 4% organic sales growth and 26% incrementals (below consensus of 28.5%). Similarly, we think that consensus incremental margin of 30% in 4Q is several hundred basis points too high. Eddyfi and volumes growth should benefit margins in 2H (we assume Eddyfi revenues come in at 30% incrementals), but we think that net of price-cost headwinds, incrementals will land closer to our 26% forecasts in 2H.
- Changes to our forecasts: We remain Buy rated but recently lowered our price target to $145 from $154. The reduction is due to a 2% decrease in our EPS forecasts and a lowering of our applied NTM P/E to 21x from 24x. Our new multiple still assumes a 10% discount for ESAB shares and reflects the broader de-rating in industrials, marking to market the XLI multiple to 23x.

EMR- We think organic growth guidance can be about 5.5% in fiscal 2027, which is a nice acceleration from fiscal 2026. Supporting this is order growth of about 7% and reversal of software contract-renewal headwind (we expect $50-60 million benefit in 2027 and another $50-60 million in fiscal 2028, with good contribution margins). Note, the company's long term framework (to 2028) points to about 40% incremental margins, which implies something higher in fiscal 2027 and 2028; and we think this is the right expectation. This should allow EPS growth of low to mid-teens in 2027 which is above consensus.

ETN- We're expecting a strong quarter from ETN with results coming in towards the high end of guidance. This should be no surprise given CEO comments at a recent conference, but we think full year numbers are tracking to the high end which implies upside to 4Q consensus. We also see upside to 2027 expectations, though we note more capacity is coming online in 2027 (including a big three-phase transformer plant), so margin outlook in 2027 will be a key watch item in the coming months. We estimate, for example, that this new facility represents about $300 million of investment vs. average of about $40 million for each of the other 23 new facilities that is part of the company's recent expansion plan. We think the recent positive inflection in execution can be sustained in 2027, which underpins our more positive outlook on shares.

FAST- We expect FAST to deliver another strong quarter, driven by a combination of company specific execution and a gradually improving industrial backdrop. The results should provide a constructive read through indicator for the broader industrial trends to begin the earnings season. For Q3, we model 35c EPS, about 3% above consensus, reflecting higher sales than consensus and an improving operating leverage.

- Our forecast includes 16.5% daily sales growth and an operating margin of 21.0%, flat year over year. This implies 23% incremental margin, improving from the prior quarter on easier comparisons. That said, incremental remains below the company's long term target of 25% due to price/cost headwinds, despite sequential improvement. We expect the majority of revenue growth to be volume driven, with pricing contributing moderating on tougher comps. Importantly, pricing remains broadly stable on a two year stacked basis (at about 4.5%).
- On gross margin, we model 10 bps sequential contraction, consistent with typical seasonal patterns. We continue to see limited risk from inflationary pressures given Fastenal's strong visibility into its supply chain and demonstrated ability to adjust pricing to maintain a relatively neutral price/cost position across much of its product portfolio (we also think price adjustments from higher material and freight costs is much easier to pass through in near-real time).

FLS- We believe that the business remains on track to deliver on their organic growth targets in the back half. Despite recent headlines in from the Middle East, we think the headwinds are progressing as expected. Note that the company expects a similar year over year impact in the second half versus the first half from the Middle East. We currently model flat organic growth in 3Q, accelerating to +8% organic growth in 4Q, supported by strength in the aftermarket business and the timing of large, project backlog converting to revenue. On margins, we think total company operating margins should be up sequentially as the company makes progress on 80/20 actions and aftermarket growth helps support margin mix. In regards to cost inflation, we don't think it should have a material impact in the quarter as the company has been able to price for the inflation, and, in some regions, favorable foreign exchange has also helped offset cost pressures.

- Looking ahead to next year, we are optimistic that mid single organic growth is possible in 2027. So far this year, organic bookings and backlog have been up about mid single digit, supported by general industries and power, which, if continues through the back half plus the help from the Trillium acquisition, sets the company up favorably to deliver on mid single digit organic growth next year. We would also note that the company will be slated to exit the year in the high single digits and will then face a relatively easier 1Q comp from MRO and Middle East headwinds.

FTV- We see 3Q trending in line with expectations. But, we are slightly cautious on the margin ramp going into 4Q. For the quarter, we are modeling 3Q EPS of $0.70, in line with consensus, and this includes 3.7% organic growth, with growth being led by IOS. While organic growth is decelerating from the +6% range in 1H, we think this is driven by tougher comps and higher number of selling days in 1Q. Excluding these factors, we think this implies sales growth being consistent to the last two quarters.

- On margins, we are modeling 27.3% which is flattish sequentially. We think operating margins should step down slightly into 3Q on lower sequential revenues which implies a meaningful step up (+300bps in magnitude) into 4Q to get to the low end of the 50-100bps margin expansion target. Historically, in 2024 and 2025, operating margins have expanded 300bps and 200bps, respectively, sequentially into 4Q. So while it has been done historically, we do not view there to be much upside to the implied margin performance. That said, we do expect the company to remain positive on price/cost dynamics.

GTES- We expect 3Q results to support our view that GTES is a beneficiary of the ongoing cyclical recovery. We have found that when the ISM turns positive the cycle typically lasts for years, not months (link). What we think is particularly unique for GTES is that there is a cyclical growth element being combined with a market penetration story (personal mobility) and a nascent yet ramping data center business. Recent conference commentary has been constructive in that the company has 1) not yet felt the benefit of a restock from distribution partners and 2) OE order rates have broadly stabilized, particularly in the Ag vertical, which provides a positive setup into 2027.

- Heading into 3Q, we think that results are largely tracking in line with expectations. Management has guided organic growth to pick up (+5.5% in 3Q and +6.5% in 4Q) and for ~23.5%+ EBITDA margin in the second half. We currently model organic slightly ahead (+6% and +7.5%, respectively). For back half EBITDA margin targets, we think the company should be able to execute on them despite recent inflationary cost pressures as GTES realizes cost on a lag and has also priced the business for higher inflation.
- Setup into 2027: We think there is a positive setup brewing for the company as we head into next year. GTES can potentially exit the year in the mid-to-high single digit organic range and will be comping against ERP headwinds in 1Q next year. On top of the momentum in organic growth, the company has a number of 80/20, productivity, and footprint rationalization initiatives that should be broad tailwinds for profitability. To this point, we currently model EBITDA margins in 2027 expanding by over 100bps year over year. With the stock currently trading at 14x NTM P/E, a discount to the broader industrial sector at 23x, we think the valuation screens too low.

GWW- We expect 3Q results to be largely in line with consensus, although incremental inflationary headwinds remain a watch item. Following management's comments of over 13% growth in July, we expect low double digit growth to continue through rest of the quarter, reflecting sustained MRO market momentum and share gain (UBSe 3Q growth of 12%). However, we expect gross margin to be modestly lower year over year on price/cost headwinds. While inflation and freight costs remain incremental headwinds, we believe the impact should be limited in the quarter. As a result, we model 20% incremental margin, moderating from 28% in the last quarter due to price/cost headwinds and absence of tariff refunds but support from lower marketing costs. Pricing should moderate sequentially despite the company's 1% September price increase, primarily due to difficult comp from last year's 2.5% price increases.

HUBB- We expect 3Q to be another quarter of low double digit growth in organic sales and EPS. We think these are solid operational results for a company whose shares are trading at 20x NTM P/E (vs industrial sector at 23x), but whether they are reflected in a higher share price is another question. For example, year to date HUBB shares are flat despite NTM EPS being revised 12% higher. The de-rating seems to align with our view on shares, as HUBB's growth is good but there is much stronger growth from electrical peers with more direct data center exposure. Our sense is that a positive catalyst for shares would be continued 10%+ organic sales growth into 2027, vs consensus +7%. We currently project 8% growth next year, and think that 9% is a more likely upside case.

- Details on our model: We model 3Q EPS of $5.77, ahead of consensus $5.75. Our forecast assumes organic sales +11.7% year over year, including volumes up 7.6%. Operating margin should be up meaningfully sequentially (UBSe +110 basis points to 25.0%) due in large part to a $20 million tariff refund. The refund benefit helps to drive 30% incrementals in 3Q, which we expect to moderate to 25% in 4Q. Given the rise in input costs, we'd expect to see incremental price actions to be price-cost neutral or better.

IR- We have a positive view on IR ahead of 3Q results. At a high level we think that 2H is tracking in line with expectations for improving sales volumes and margins relative to 1H, and we expect strong bookings activity to provide a setup for solid growth into 2027 (we expect book to bill of above 1x in 2H which is unseasonally strong).

- Part of the 2H margin uplift should be attributable to more tariff refunds which were not included in the guide due to limited visibility on timing (in magnitude, we think multiples of the $10 million that benefitted 2Q results). But the majority of the margin increase should be related to operational factors like better price-cost and volumes, which are more closely tied to sentiment. The bottom line is that improving volume trends and more normal incremental margins should signal a recovery in IR shares, which are trading at a meaningful discount to the sector and IR's own history.
- More details: We model 3Q EPS of 92c, ahead of consensus of 90c on better margins and sales. We model organic sales growth of 3.4% year over year, decelerating from 4.1% last quarter on a tougher prior year comp, and we think an achievable bar given better price realization and positive order momentum in July. Management has commented that IT&S orders were up mid-teens in July, by our math indicating mid to high single digit order growth for all of 3Q. We think this is a positive indicator of short cycle demand within the quarter, and along with our expectation for an above-seasonal BtB of >1x in 2H is a leading indicator of solid organic sales growth into next year. On margins, we expect 2H margins to benefit from better price-cost, volume leverage, and tariff refunds (expecting multiples of the $10 million received in 2Q). Our 3Q consolidated EBITDA margin of 27.0% represents incrementals that are still depressed at 12% year over year, but we expect further improvement in 4Q to bring the 2026 exit rate to a more normal 35% incremental. Assuming a similar rate for the full year on 6% organic sales growth results in 12% EPS growth in 2027. For a stock that is currently trading at a 15% discount to the XLI, well below its recent history of a double-digit premium, we think this signals meaningful upside to the equity value over the next 12 months.

ITT- We believe that 3Q results will come in largely as expected. We think near term demand trends should be supported by the 1.1x book to bill in the first half. We also think that segment margins should pick up sequentially into 3Q and 4Q from modest volume leverage and further integration of SPX Flow.

- For the quarter, we are modeling 3Q EPS of $2.08, similar to 2Q and in line with consensus expectations. Our model assumes total company organic growth year over year of 7% and 23% incremental margin year over year. We think investor focus for ITT will center around the implied deceleration in 2H organic. We would note that the company will have a year over year headwind from 4 less selling days in 4Q, and that the year over year organic growth comparisons will get tougher as we progress through the back half. For example, in the Flow Technologies segment, organic growth was up low single digits organically in the first half last year and then was up low double digits in the second half. Also impacting the Flow Technologies segment, the Middle East region represents about 4% of total sales / 10% of the segment, and the segment saw positive growth in the Middle East so far this year due to projects booked last year that shipped in the first half this year. Going into the second half, we think some of the Middle East activity should subside. That said, broad strength in North America and incremental project wins in Latin America will help positively offset. In Connect & Control Technologies, we currently model low teens organic growth for the year. We think full year incrementals for the segment could be in the high 20s% range, slightly lower than normal, as the company invests in more capacity.

JCI- We see potential for JCI to achieve organic revenue growth of double digits in fiscal 2027E with higher than average incremental margins. This is supported by record backlog ($21 billion as of the last quarter), which we expect to continue growing on a sequential basis in fiscal 4Q. If achieved, this would translate to meaningful positive revision to current expectations (we estimate strong double digits after already 10% revisions over the last several months).

- We believe JCI's business outlook is getting strong by the day. Demand appears robust, and the company's productivity initiatives should allow this growth to drop disproportionately to the bottom line. We also think order and backlog trends will make this not just a 2027 story, but 2028 and beyond, as well. Maintain Buy.

- Details on model: We forecast fiscal 2027 EPS of $6.46 EPS, 7% ahead of consensus. Our estimates include 10% organic sales growth and 40% incremental. We suspect initial guide will be about 10% in keeping with management's prudent approach. Importantly, we think this growth will come in at incremental margins above the company's 30%+ long term framework, reflecting the meaningful productivity work outlined at its recent analyst meeting. For other below the line items, we incorporate benefits from $40 million lower corporate expense, $1 billion share repurchase partially offset by higher tax rate of 18% (vs 17% in 2026).
- For fiscal 4Q, we model $1.59 EPS, 1% ahead of consensus expectations. Our forecasts for the quarter include 10% organic sales growth and 240 bps year over year operating margin expansion. Implied incremental margin is about 45% in the quarter, consistent with the last quarter. We also see another strong quarter for orders supporting sequential backlog increase, and supporting our constructive outlook for fiscal 2027.

LECO- The bottom line is that we view price-cost headwinds as temporary, and the more important factor in the share price outlook is that growth trends for LECO's products are improving, as evidenced by an elevated order book ex Automotive. In our view, the broadening end market recovery along with more normal incremental margins into 2027 signals further upside to the equity value.

- We expect 3Q results to show continued momentum on volumes partly offset by incremental margin headwinds. After 2Q's return to volume growth for the first time since 2023 (consolidated +2%, Americas +7%) we expect further improvement in 3Q. In terms of the P/L, the volume acceleration we expect should be partly offset by cost inflation and some tightness in specific parts of the business (i.e., electronic components for PC boards) that limits incrementals to the low 20% range. But the net result of our assumptions is a still solid 14% EPS growth year over year. Price increases in response to inflation should start to show up in revenues in 3Q, but ramp in 4Q to 100 basis points on top of previous expectations.
- Details on our model: We model 3Q EPS of $2.81, vs consensus of $2.82, assuming incrementals of 21% (vs new guidance of low 20%, down from prior guidance of mid 20% on cost headwinds). Our model assumes organic sales growth of 8.7% year over year, including volumes +3.7% which is a step up from +2.4% in 2Q. We expect Americas volumes to again grow 7%.

LII- We think recent LII share price weakness has been driven by residential market softness along with concerns around potential share loss. While we expect those dynamics to remain a headwind in Q3, we see signs that the underlying trends are continuing to stabilize. As a result, we believe consensus estimates are well calibrated into the quarter with limited downside risk. We would also note that the stock is now trading at 14x 2027 EPS estimate, which is close to 1 std below its historical average valuation. In our view, this reflects a significant amount of the current residential market uncertainty.

- For Q3, we model Lennox EPS of $7.50, in line with consensus, though we see the setup as more mixed beneath the surface. We believe Home Comfort Solutions (resi) is trending modestly better than investor expectations, while consensus assumptions for Building Climate Solutions (commercial) margin needs to be calibrated lower.
- Within Home Comfort Solutions, we continue to see pressure from residential new construction activity in the direct channel. These headwinds should begin to ease starting in 4Q due to easier comparisons. We model segment volumes down 1% in the quarter, which includes 10% growth in the two-step channel offset by a 5% decline in one-step. Looking at margins, we expect 90bps year over year decline in the segment. This implies around 30% incremental, excluding a $15 million impact related to absorption headwind and the Heat Controller acquisition.
- Within Building Control Solutions, we believe revenue growth could be trending ahead of expectations. Management's outlook embeds a degree of caution tied to uncertainty around demand from several large retail customers, yet we have not observed any meaningful deterioration in activity levels. However, we expect BCS segment margins to decline approximately 250bps year over year, reflecting particularly difficult comparisons. We note Q3 margins last year benefited from favorable pricing dynamics ahead of subsequent cost inflation pressures. Therefore, we expect some normalization this year.

- Details on our model: We model 3Q EPS of $7.50, in line with consensus. Our assumptions include 5% organic sales growth year over year, including 1% volume and 4% price. We expect Home Building Solutions volume to be down 1% while Building Climate should remain strong at 6%. On margin, we model 140 bps year over year margin contraction driven by tough comps, absorption headwind and dilution from heat controller acquisition.

MMM- We're not expecting any fireworks either way with regard to upcoming results. We think results are likely tracking well with prior expectations, with organic growth of about 3.5% in 3Q and a bit above 4% in 4Q. And we don't expect any change to full year guidance that was raised last quarter. Shares typically move only with meaningful shifts in organic growth quarter to quarter, so we expect a largely neutral set up into the print. But we think the headline 'boring' results are masking extremely good execution under the surface. For example, we estimate the company has absorbed about $500 million in incremental headwinds from tariffs and, more recently, higher oil prices. Despite this, we expect operating margins to come in better than long term planning, which didn't contemplate these headwinds. This reflects proactive pricing actions as well as productivity, which allows incremental headwinds to not just be offset in $ terms but also % terms, which is impressive, in our view. Importantly, we think these pricing and productivity achievements are structural, which could allow for further profit uplift if some of the more transitory elements of headline inflation (i.e. oil) reverse. The bottom line is we expect this to be a good quarter for MMM, albeit in-line with expectations. We still see nice upside potential to 2027 consensus expectations....about 2% upside out of the gate, in our view, with potential for more meaningful revision as we progress through 2027 (ultimately we think 2027 EPS will be about 7% higher than current consensus when it's all said and done).

MOD- We see potential for meaningful recovery as we progress to year end. Key to the recovery is a return to sequential growth, and we expect the company's data center revenue to increase substantially in F2Q (+$100 million/28% vs. 1Q27). We expect operating leverage to be very strong on the back of this sequential surge (19.5% EBITDA margin, up 470 basis points vs. 1Q) as cost absorption improves on higher utilization. We also have confidence in the company's ability to make meaningful progress in its supply chain challenges, which has been a recurring issue resulting from outsized demand. That being said, we'd also highlight that MOD's fan supply challenges are just one (particularly impactful) example of a shortage within a broader data center supply chain that will likely remain tight due to strong demand. Recent competitive dynamics related to the supply chain are positive, in our view, as larger, better capitalized companies focus on capacity expansion of critical components (like fans used in chillers). The bottom line is our positive thesis on MOD has not changed, and we have confidence in the sequential increase in revenue expected this quarter. The recent sell-off in this context creates a compelling buying opportunity, in our view.

- More details on the upcoming quarter: We model F2Q EBITDA of $148 million, vs consensus of $144 million. Our forecast assumes consolidated sales growth of 32% year over year, accelerating from +24% last quarter on an organic basis. Growth should be led by the Data Center segment, where we model a 100% year over year increase. On margins, we expect a big step up in consolidated EBITDA margin to 15.2% in F2Q from 12.2% last quarter. We think such an increase is achievable as volumes ramp and utilization improves. MOD's margin was at this level two quarters ago, and within the Data Center segment, we estimate that our F2Q Data Center margin assumption equates to a sequential incremental margin of 20% excluding headwinds from cost under-absorption in F1Q. We also look for meaningful margin expansion within the Commercial HVAC segment from self-help and volume growth.

NVT- We see a positive setup for NVT shares into Q3 results because there is a high likelihood of meaningful upward revisions to consensus forecasts, in our view, and shares are currently trading at a relatively low 18x our above-consensus 2028 EPS (vs the XLI at 19x and data center peers at over 20x).

- We expect NVT's data center and power utilities businesses, now over 60% of NVT's consolidated revenues, to continue to be the source of strong results. Our 3Q EPS forecast of $1.40 is above consensus of $1.39 and guidance of $1.35-$1.38, but still we think allows for upside. For example, in our model the 36% year over year increase in organic growth we forecast would result in a $40 million sequential step down in consolidated sales. Some of the new capacity coming online in Blaine is meant to absorb outsized demand being met by NVT's existing Anoka facility, but still we think that continued demand momentum and ramping of capacity could allow for revenues to be sequentially up in the quarter. On margins, we expect 3Q incrementals to be similar to 2Q's 24% year over year as NVT continues to invest.

- On orders, we believe that intake will continue to suggest strong demand as indicated in July. 3Q26 has a difficult prior year comp (consolidated orders +65%, and we think data center up over 250%) but in dollar terms we think this comp is much less challenging.
- The bottom line is we expect another quarter of top-decile results (e.g., EPS up over 50%) with potential for upward revisions to move shares higher. Recent stock volatility has created a buying opportunity for outsized sales/EPS growth led by data center power utilities, with shares today trading at a relatively low 5% premium to the XLI on consensus NTM P/E.

OTIS- We expect Q3 results to show progress on service margin improvement and continue to view that full year EPS is tracking towards the high end of the range. For Q3, we model $1.01 EPS, largely in line with consensus expectations. The primary focus remains on the second half service margin recovery, which we believe remains on track. We model 80bps sequential margin improvement in Q3 driven by repair pricing, ongoing cost reduction actions, and volume leverage. Importantly, management implemented micro pricing initiatives in the repair business during the quarter, which should provide incremental support to both revenue growth and profitability. That said, we expect service sales growth to decelerate in Q3 as both repair and modernization activity normalize from very strong levels in the last quarter, although still at very healthy levels. In new equipment, we expect sales to turn modestly positive year over year. However, we do not expect meaningful margin improvement given continued weakness in China, which remains the company's highest margin new equipment market.

- We do not expect meaningful improvement in retention rates through the balance of 2026. In our view, the benefits from recent investments in service quality and customer engagement are likely to take time to materialize and should benefit over the next few years.
- Looking ahead to 2027, we expect service margins to return to a margin expansion trajectory driven by flow through of 2H'26 pricing actions and cost reduction initiatives. However, we believe margin expansion is likely to remain below the historical 40-50 bps annual run rate, reflecting ongoing investments and commercial actions aimed at stabilizing retention rates. As a result, we remain below street expectations and currently model 2027 EPS of $4.44, 2% below consensus.

PH- We see a favorable set up for PH shares into the fiscal 1Q print. Demand trends appear to be strengthening across most of the portfolio, reflecting a broad industrial recovery alongside sustained strength in Aerospace. We believe the overall industrial recovery is in the early stages, suggesting a long runway for organic sales to expand. As a result, we continue to see a path to double digit EPS upside versus consensus expectations for the full year. We expect the quarter to further reinforce confidence in the company's earnings trajectory and support positive earnings revisions.

- For fiscal 1Q, we forecast EPS of $8.24, 1% above consensus. Our model assumes 8% organic sales growth year over year and 30% incremental, resulting in 30bps of year over year margin expansion. Within the segments, we forecast 7% organic sales growth in the Industrial businesses and 11% growth in Aerospace, with 30% incremental across each of the segments. We also expect orders to remain healthy and potentially accelerate on a trailing twelve month basis, supporting improving demand conditions. Notably, management is expected to begin providing trailing twelve month order growth metrics for each business going forward.
- For fiscal 2027, we forecast $35.89 EPS, 2% above consensus. We model 7% organic sales growth and 30 bps year over year margin expansion for the full year, which implies 30% incremental margin. We would also expect updated guidance to reflect the recently closed Filtration Group acquisition, which should contribute

1% to full year EPS, as per our analysis.

PNR- We inched our EPS estimate to the high end of the 3Q guided range and are slightly raising our 4Q EPS estimate as well, bringing FY EPS estimate to $4.68 vs current consensus of $4.65. With the bulk of the Pool destock impacting 2Q, we feel comfortable with the back half outlook for Pool volumes, given 1) Pool Corp inventories are more aligned exiting 2Q, 2) back half revenues appear seasonally in-line, adjusted for the destock impacting 2Q and 3Q, and 3) pool industry sell through is still tracking relatively flattish (i.e. low/mid single digit underlying volumes) vs. PNR pool volumes down over 20% this year. We talk about some minor upside to Pool margins below; however, we think what's more important for the stock to re-rate over the medium term is getting Pool organic growth back on track. We think this will be a gradual process over the next year. The company has talked about adding more sales coverage, a new regional sales structure to drive accountability, re-engaging old customer relationships, and further educating the channel on their products.

- We see some moderate upside to pool margins as we progress through the back half. The segment should have the benefit of mid-single digit pricing tailwinds (inflationary cost/tariff price carry over in 3Q and normal business price increase in 4Q). Combining the 2H pricing benefit (+$30 million year over year) and a mid 50s % decremental margin on volume, we see a path for total segment decremental margin to sequentially improve from 2Q (ex tariff refunds) which was about 60%. For 3Q, we model Pool segment margin of 25.5% (vs consensus of 24.9%).
- We would also note that Taco Group is not contemplated in the current guide as the deal is expected to close in 4Q. The company expects Taco Group to be $0.10 to $0.15 accretive to EPS in 2027.

ROK- We see some upside to consensus estimates for ROK's upcoming F4Q and FY27, but we don't think enough to justify a more positive view on shares. For example, we model FY27 organic sales growth at the upper end of ROK's 5-8% framework, which at 35% incremental margins results in EPS of $15.40. If correct, this projection would mean relatively modest upward revisions of 4% to consensus, and given that shares already trade at 28x this level of EPS, we don't see much upside to the equity value. For the upcoming quarter we model EPS $3.72, ahead of consensus of $3.68 on better organic sales growth and assuming operating margins flat sequentially. With our preview we raise our EPS forecasts for FY26 / FY27 by 1% / 4% on better growth and margins, but leave our price target unchanged assuming a slightly lower multiple.

SPXC- Near-term conditions remain challenging despite the bullish long-term outlook. We expect HVAC margins to soften in 3Q due to incremental supply chain costs and inflationary pressures. These headwinds will likely persist into 4Q, although pricing actions should increasingly offset them. As a result, we expect full-year earnings to trend toward the low end of the guidance range, even as revenue approaches the high end.

- Modeling adjustments. For the quarter, we model EPS of $2.04, about 7% below consensus. Our assumptions include 11.5% organic sales growth and 20 bps of year over year margin contraction, implying 21% incremental margin. We expect org sales growth to be driven by 24% growth in HVAC, while D&M should be down 12% due to tough comp and $15 million revenue pull forward from 3Q into 2Q. On margins, we expect flattish to slightly down margins across both the segments. This reflects supply chain and inflationary headwinds in HVAC while revenue headwinds in D&M.
- For the full year, we model $8.22 EPS which is towards the low end of the full year guide. Our assumptions include 14% organic sales growth and 70 bps year over year margin expansion, implying 25% incremental margin. However, this includes 60bps year over year margin contraction in HVAC segment on supply chain and inflationary pressure in 2H, following tariffs and start up costs in 1H.
- Bottom line: We remain constructive on SPXC's medium- and long-term prospects, supported by strong data-center demand and the OlympusMAX opportunity. In the near term, however, HVAC margins will likely remain under pressure from incremental supply chain-related costs.

SWK- The company is on track to deliver their 2H 34-35% gross margin targets. While there are incremental costs broadly speaking, we think it is largely manageable and not needle moving for SWK. Lower tariff costs, seasonality, less volume deleverage year over year, and productivity initiatives should more than offset the incremental costs.

Additionally, in regards to back half gross margins, between management's forward 6 month visibility into their COGS and recent execution, we remain confident that the margin targets are still achievable.

- But beyond gross margin targets, we think a pick up in organic growth will be key for the stock. Near term, we model positive volume growth in Tools & Outdoor (flat pricing) in the back half. But, more mid-term, we see an outcome where organic growth picks up versus 2026 as a result of commercial initiatives, not necessarily cyclical driven: product refreshes/launches (Craftsman), adding sales coverage (Stanley), and leaning into the professional/adjacent trade groups (e.g. commercial, industrial, electrical, etc.).
- More structurally, SWK has been a journey of portfolio pruning (most recently selling Excel Industries) and balance sheet de-leveraging. So for the first time in a while, the company will have the capacity to be more active in capital deployment which, in our view, presents modest upside to the equity value. Also, between the various moving parts (footprint consolidation and material cost reduction), we feel good about the productivity initiatives (before additional pricing) to offset inflationary pressures while driving continued margin expansion.

TDY- We are positive on the company heading into results, modeling EPS of $6.20 which is slightly ahead of Consensus of $6.15. We think trends in the business, especially defense, have improved versus 2Q earnings as the Golden Dome programs were awarded in July and will be additive to the company's backlog. In the more commercial parts of the business (i.e. machine vision, healthcare, marine), we expect the recent momentum to continue.

- For the quarter, we model $6.20 of EPS, above the high end of guidance and Consensus. Our EPS estimate represents 7% total company organic growth, a slight step down vs the 9% organic growth last quarter. But, we think there is some opportunity for sales in Digital Imaging to come in flat to above sequentially, excluding the slight pull in to 2Q which we estimate to be $15/20 million in magnitude, in line with seasonality. As a result of the flattish to slight better revenue, we model 24% operating margin (versus Consensus 23.6%) for the segment.
- Heading into next year, we currently model $26.80 in EPS, representing 5% organic growth and 33% incremental margin year over year (excluding the Varex acquisition which is expected to close in 1Q). We feel good about the company's growth algorithm heading into next year. Across the business, growth in the longer cycle parts of the business (i.e. defense) should remain durable due to trends in unmanned and space, while the commercial end markets should continue to be supported by some cyclical recovery (link). To this point, there has been a number of awards for Teledyne announced year-to-date, aside from Golden Dome, that would be a broad tailwind, assuming it's all shipped next year, and that is before the more short cycle, commercial end markets also contributes organically.

TT- We expect 3Q results to be largely in line with expectations, with better than expected revenue offset by incremental inflationary pressures. On the cost side, inflation remains a modest near term headwind, in our view, driven primarily by tier 2 suppliers where cost increases are felt more immediately. While pricing should ultimately offset these pressures, it could come with a lag impacting margins in the near term. That said, we continue to view the demand environment as healthy, particularly in the Applied business, where broad-based strength persists except for ongoing weakness in the Middle East. We also see continued signs of stabilization in residential HVAC, with market trends likely tracking modestly ahead of prior expectations. Despite some very near term margin dynamics, we think the medium to long term story is very positive, with accelerating growth across all of Trane's end markets in 2027.

VNT- Heading into 3Q earnings, we think quarterly results are tracking relatively in line with expectations. For the quarter, we are modelling $0.84 of EPS, in line with Consensus. We expect the relative weakness in Repair Solutions to continue to be positively offset by resilient trends from the convenience, retail businesses. Heading into 2027, we are lowering our full year EPS expectations by 3% as we adjust for some below the line items (higher interest expense) and temper our recovery expectations for Repair Solutions, modelling +1% organic growth for the segment. That said, on a total company basis, we currently model 4% organic growth and about 90bps of margin expansion (supported by modest volume leverage, recent divestitures, and 80/20 initiatives), led by Mobility Technologies and Environmental & Fueling Solutions.

VRT- With shares down over 20% in the last three months, we think that 3Q results will show continued momentum and support upside to the equity value. We model EPS of $1.82, up an impressive 46% year over year and above the midpoint of guidance (range: $1.77-$1.83). VRT's strong operational results should be supported by double-digit organic sales growth and margin expansion. We think that management continues to have a high degree of visibility on revenues, which along with capacity expansion allows us to model a meaningful step up in 3Q / 2H26 sales and profit.

- Details on our model: We model 35% organic sales growth year over year in 3Q with 30% incremental margin. Growth should be solidly double-digits in all three segments but led by Americas and APAC, while EMEA growth continues to ramp off a lower base. 2H margins in the APAC segment should be below the consolidated level as the greenfield in Malaysia ramps.
- Beyond the quarter, we think the data center pipeline remains strong and that VRT's role in this market remains critical. Stocks with high AI exposure have experienced a high level of volatility over the last three months given concerns about data center moratoriums and recent comments from AI companies about slowing the pace of development. At the same time, however, the pipeline for demand is incredibly strong. Our Global Data Center Monitor from UBS Evidence Lab points to a further acceleration in AI related infrastructure investment. Data centers in the planning stage increased by 45% (or 70 gigawatts) in 2Q'26 compared to 1Q'26. To put this into perspective, the 70 gigawatt increase that we saw in three months implies an additional $3.5 trillion of capex (assuming $50 billion per GW), compared to $400 billion of hyperscaler capex in all of 2025. For VRT alone this level of data center capacity implies a $245 billion market, assuming $3.5 million of content per megawatt. Link to report here.

ZBRA- We expect third quarter results to come in at the high end of the guidance, driven by better than anticipated memory supply availability. Importantly, the company's recently announced October price increases should provide a meaningful offset to ongoing memory cost inflation and broader input cost pressures, supporting margin performance into 2027. For the quarter, management's outlook incorporated a degree of conservatism around memory related supply availability, but we believe it trending better supporting upside. While freight costs are likely trending somewhat above initial forecasts, we view the impact as manageable given freight represents only 2% of sales, limiting the earnings sensitivity. Overall, we believe the combination of better supply, pricing actions, and contained inflationary pressures positions Zebra favorably heading into the quarter and supports continued confidence in the earnings trajectory.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

Risk statement: The Electrical Equipment and Multi Industry sector faces a broad range of risks. It is cyclical in nature with exposure to the underlying cycles inherent in everything from aviation, auto, trucking and trains to construction and consumer electronics to mining, power, oil and gas and more depending on the specific stock. EEMI companies are subject to risks associated with unexpected changes in the underlying global macro environment, currency and interest rate movements, commodity price inflation as well as company-specific execution, M&A, integration, labor relations and changes in the competitive or regulatory environment. These changes can be in the form of product technology, e-commerce and other digital disruption and/or channel disintermediation. Capacity and related pricing pressures are also a risk through the cycle. Finally, these multinational companies are subject to policy changes taking place in the United States and internationally, including those related to environmental regulation and tariffs. UBS Global Research Disclaimer

This document has been prepared by UBS Securities LLC, an affiliate of UBS AG. UBS AG, its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates, including former Credit Suisse AG and its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates are referred to herein as "UBS".

Any opinions expressed in this document may change without notice and are only current as of the date of publication. Different areas, groups, and personnel within UBS may produce and distribute separate research products independently of each other. For example, research publications from UBS CIO are produced by UBS Global Wealth Management. UBS Global Research is produced by UBS Investment Bank. Research methodologies and rating systems of each separate research organization may differ, for example, in terms of investment recommendations, investment horizon, model assumptions, and valuation methods. As a consequence, except for certain economic forecasts (for which UBS CIO and UBS Global Research may collaborate), investment recommendations, ratings, price targets, and valuations provided by each of the separate research organizations may be different, or inconsistent. You should refer to each relevant research product for the details as to their methodologies and rating system. Not all clients may have access to all products from every organization. Each research product is subject to the policies and procedures of the organization that produces it.

This document is provided solely to recipients who are expressly authorized by UBS to receive it. If you are not so authorized you must immediately destroy the document.

UBS Global Research is provided to our clients through UBS Neo, and in certain instances, UBS.com and any other system or distribution method specifically identified in one or more communications distributed through UBS Neo or UBS.com (each a system) as an approved means for distributing UBS Global Research. It may also be made available through third party vendors and distributed by UBS and/or third parties via e-mail or alternative electronic means.

All UBS Global Research is available on UBS Neo. Please contact your UBS sales representative if you wish to discuss your access to UBS Neo. Where UBS Global Research refers to "UBS Evidence Lab Inside" or has made use of data provided by UBS Evidence Lab and you would like to access that data please contact your UBS sales representative. UBS Evidence Lab data is available on UBS Neo. The level and types of services provided by UBS Global Research and UBS Evidence Lab to a client may vary depending upon various factors such as a client's individual preferences as to the frequency and manner of receiving communications, a client's risk profile and investment focus and perspective (e.g., market wide, sector specific, long-term, short-term, etc.), the size and scope of the overall client relationship with UBS Global Research and UBS Evidence Lab and legal and regulatory constraints. UBS HOLT and UBS Pharma Values are offerings of UBS Global Research. HOLT Lens is a corporate performance platform offering that provides an objective accounting-led framework for comparing and valuing companies and is available to clients of UBS Global Research; for further details and pricing please contact your UBS Sales representative. In particular, HOLT has a variety of warranted prices based on the scenario chosen; please mail UBS Securities LLC, 11 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10010, USA, Attention: Investment Research, if you are interested in the warranted price on a particular company, again subject to commercial considerations. UBS Pharma Values is an analytical tool that involves the creation of a number of individual product net present value calculations, based on published forecasts of sales for pharmaceuticals, and is available to clients of UBS Global Research; for further details and pricing please contact your UBS Sales representative. For all other specific disclaimers, please see <https://www.ubs.com/disclosures>.

When you receive UBS Global Research through a system, your access and/or use of such UBS Global Research is subject to this UBS Global Research Disclaimer and to the UBS Neo Platform Use Agreement (the "Neo Terms") together with any other relevant terms of use governing the applicable System.

When you receive UBS Global Research via a third party vendor, e-mail or other electronic means, you agree that use shall be subject to this UBS Global Research Disclaimer, the Neo Terms and where applicable the UBS Investment Bank terms of business (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/investment-bank/regulatory.html>) and to UBS's Terms of Use/Disclaimer (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/legalinfo2/disclaimer.html>). In addition, you consent to UBS processing your personal data and using cookies in accordance with our Privacy Statement (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/legalinfo2/privacy.html>) and cookie notice (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/legal/privacy/users.html>).

If you receive UBS Global Research, whether through a System or by any other means, you agree that you shall not copy, revise, amend, create a derivative work, provide to any third party, or in any way commercially exploit any UBS research provided via UBS Global Research or otherwise, and that you shall not extract data from any research or estimates provided to you via UBS Global Research or otherwise, without the prior written consent of UBS. You agree not to use UBS Global Research in any artificial intelligence system, without the prior written consent of UBS.

In certain circumstances you may receive UBS Global Research otherwise than in the capacity of a client of UBS and you understand and agree that under these circumstances (i) the UBS Global Research is provided to you for information purposes only; (ii) for the purposes of receiving it you are not intended to be and will not be treated as a "client" of UBS for any legal or regulatory purpose; (iii) the UBS Global Research must not be relied on or acted upon for any purpose; and (iv) such content is subject to the relevant disclaimers that follow.

This document is for distribution only as may be permitted by law. It is not directed to, or intended for distribution to or use by, any person or entity who is a citizen or resident of or located in any locality, state, country or other jurisdiction where such distribution, publication, availability or use would be contrary to law or regulation or would subject UBS to any registration or licensing requirement within such jurisdiction.

This document is a general communication and is educational in nature; it is not an advertisement nor is it a solicitation or an offer to buy or sell any financial instruments or to participate in any particular trading strategy. Nothing in this document constitutes a representation that any investment strategy or recommendation is suitable or appropriate to an investor's individual circumstances or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation. By providing this document, none of UBS or its representatives has any responsibility or authority to provide or have provided investment advice in a fiduciary capacity or otherwise. Investments involve risks, and investors should exercise prudence and their own judgment in making their investment decisions. None of UBS or its representatives is suggesting that the recipient or any other person take a specific course of action or any action at all. The recipient should carefully read this document in its entirety and not draw inferences or conclusions from the rating alone. By receiving this document, the recipient acknowledges and agrees with the intended purpose described above and further disclaims any expectation or belief that the information constitutes investment advice to the recipient or otherwise purports to meet the investment objectives of the recipient. The financial instruments described in the document may not be eligible for sale in all jurisdictions or to certain categories of investors.

Options, structured derivative products and futures (including OTC derivatives) are not suitable for all investors. Trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "The Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options." You may read the document at <https://www.theocc.com/publications/risks/riskchap1.jsp> or ask your salesperson for a copy. Various theoretical explanations of the risks associated with these instruments have been published. Supporting documentation for any claims, comparisons, recommendations, statistics or other technical data will be supplied upon request. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchases and sales of options, such as spreads and straddles. Because of the importance of tax considerations to many options transactions, the investor considering options should consult with his/her tax advisor as to how taxes affect the outcome of contemplated options transactions.

Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

UBS notes that no globally accepted framework or definition (legal, regulatory or otherwise) currently exists, nor is there a market consensus as to what constitutes an "ESG" (Environmental, Social or Governance) or an equivalent-label, or as to what precise attributes are required for the Information (as defined below) to be defined as ESG or equivalently-labelled. Any information, data or other content including from a third party source contained, referred to herein or used for whatsoever purpose by UBS or a third party ("Information"), in relation to any actual or potential ESG objective, issue or consideration is not intended to be relied upon for ESG classification, regulatory regime or industry initiative purposes ("ESG Regimes"). Nothing in these materials is intended to convey, suggest or indicate that UBS considers or represents any product, service, person or body mentioned in these materials as meeting or qualifying for any ESG classification, labelling or similar standards that may exist under the ESG Regimes. UBS has not conducted any assessment of compliance with ESG Regimes. Parties are reminded to make their own assessments for these purposes.

The value of any investment or income may go down as well as up, and investors may not get back the full (or any) amount invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Neither UBS nor any of its directors, employees or agents accepts any liability for any loss (including investment loss) or damage arising out of the use of all or any of the Information.

Prior to making any investment or financial decisions, any recipient of this document or the information should take steps to understand the risk and return of the investment and seek individualized advice from his or her personal financial, legal, tax and other professional advisors that takes into account all the particular facts and circumstances of his or her investment objectives.

Any prices stated in this document are for information purposes only and do not represent valuations for individual securities or other financial instruments. There is no representation that any transaction can or could have been effected at those prices, and any prices do not necessarily reflect UBS's internal books and records or theoretical model-based valuations and may be based on certain assumptions. Different assumptions by UBS or any other source may yield substantially different results.

No representation or warranty, either expressed or implied, is provided in relation to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information contained in any materials to which this document relates (the "Information"), except with respect to Information concerning UBS. The Information is not intended to be a complete statement or summary of the securities, markets or developments referred to in the document. UBS does not undertake to update or keep current the Information. Any statements contained in this report attributed to a third party represent UBS's interpretation of the data, information and/or opinions provided by that third party either publicly or through a subscription service, and such use and interpretation have not been reviewed by the third party. In no circumstances may this document or any of the Information (including any forecast, value, index or other calculated amount ("Values")) be used for any of the following purposes:

- (i) valuation or accounting purposes;
- (ii) to determine the amounts due or payable, the price or the value of any financial instrument or financial contract; or
- (iii) to measure the performance of any financial instrument including, without limitation, for the purpose of tracking the return or performance of any Value or of defining the asset allocation of portfolio or of computing performance fees.

By receiving this document and the Information you will be deemed to represent and warrant to UBS that you will not use this document or any of the Information for any of the above purposes or otherwise rely upon this document or any of the Information.

UBS has policies and procedures, which include, without limitation, independence policies and permanent information barriers, that are intended, and upon which UBS relies, to manage potential conflicts of interest and control the flow of information within divisions of UBS and among its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates. UBS does and seeks to do business with companies covered in its research reports. As a result, investors should be aware that the firm may have a conflict of interest that could affect the objectivity of this report. Investors should consider this report as only a single factor in making their investment decision. For further information on the ways in which UBS Global Research manages conflicts and maintains independence of its research products, historical performance information and certain additional disclosures concerning UBS Global Research recommendations, please visit <https://www.ubs.com/disclosures>.

UBS Global Research will initiate, update and cease coverage solely at the discretion of UBS Global Research Management, which will also have sole discretion on the timing and frequency of any published research product. The analysis contained in this document is based on numerous assumptions. All material information in relation to published research reports, such as valuation methodology, risk statements, underlying assumptions (including sensitivity analysis of those assumptions), ratings history etc. as required by the Market Abuse Regulation, can be found on UBS Neo. Different assumptions could result in materially different results.

UBS Global Research may utilise artificial intelligence tools ("AI Tools") in the preparation of this document. Notwithstanding any such use of AI Tools, this document has undergone human review.

The analyst(s) responsible for the preparation of this document may interact with trading desk personnel, sales personnel and other parties for the purpose of gathering, applying and interpreting market information. UBS relies on information barriers to control the flow of information contained in one or more areas within UBS into other areas, units, groups or affiliates of UBS. The compensation of the analyst who prepared this document is determined exclusively by UBS Global Research management and senior management (not including investment banking). Analyst compensation is not based on investment banking revenues; however, compensation may relate to the revenues of UBS and/or its divisions as a whole, of which investment banking, sales and trading are a part, and UBS as a whole.

For financial instruments admitted to trading on an EU regulated market: UBS (excluding UBS Securities LLC) acts as a market maker or liquidity provider (in accordance with the interpretation of these terms under English law or, if not carried out by UBS in the UK the law of the relevant jurisdiction in which UBS determines it carries out the activity) in the financial instruments of the issuer save that where the activity of liquidity provider is carried out in accordance with the definition given to it by the laws and regulations of any other EU jurisdictions, such information is separately disclosed in this document. For financial instruments admitted to trading on a non-EU regulated market: UBS may act as a market maker save that where this activity is carried out in the US in accordance with the definition given to it by the relevant laws and regulations, such activity will be specifically disclosed in this document. UBS may have issued a warrant the value of which is based on one or more of the financial instruments referred to in the document. UBS and its affiliates and employees may have long or short positions, trade as principal and buy and sell in instruments or derivatives identified herein; such transactions or positions may be inconsistent with the opinions expressed in this document.

Within the past 12 months UBS may have received or provided investment services and activities or ancillary services as per MiFID II which may have given rise to a payment or promise of a payment in relation to these services from or to this company.

Please note that all transactions conducted by UBS are consistent with sanctions regulations imposed by Switzerland, the European Union, the United Nations, the United Kingdom and the United States, per UBS' global sanctions policy. UBS opinion as to future investment worthiness assumes no new sanctions are imposed.

US persons are prohibited from purchasing or selling securities of certain companies designated as being associated with the Chinese Military in accordance with the amended US Presidential Executive Order 13959.

Risk information:

You agree that you shall not copy, revise, amend, create a derivative work, provide to any third party, or in any way commercially exploit any UBS research, and that you shall not extract data from any research or estimates, without the prior written consent of UBS.

This document is for distribution only as may be permitted by law. It is not directed to, or intended for distribution to or use by, any person or entity who is a citizen or resident of or located in any locality, state, country or other jurisdiction where such distribution, publication, availability or use would be contrary to law or regulation or would subject UBS to any registration or licensing requirement within such jurisdiction.

This document is for your information only; it is not an advertisement nor is it a solicitation or an offer to buy or sell any financial instruments or to participate in any particular trading strategy. Nothing in this document constitutes a representation that any investment strategy or recommendation is suitable or appropriate to an investor's individual circumstances or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation. By providing this document, none of UBS or its representatives has any responsibility or authority to provide or have provided investment advice in a fiduciary capacity or otherwise. Investments involve risks, and investors should exercise prudence and their own judgment in making their investment decisions. None of UBS or its representatives is suggesting that the recipient or any other person take a specific course of action or any action at all. By receiving this document, the recipient acknowledges and agrees with the intended purpose described above and further disclaims any expectation or belief that the information constitutes investment advice to the recipient or otherwise purports to meet the investment objectives of the recipient. The financial instruments described in the document may not be eligible for sale in all jurisdictions or to certain categories of investors.

Options, derivative products and futures are not suitable for all investors, and trading in these instruments is considered risky. Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

The value of any investment or income may go down as well as up, and investors may not get back the full (or any) amount invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Neither UBS nor any of its directors, employees or agents accepts any liability for any loss (including investment loss) or damage arising out of the use of all or any of the information (as defined below).

Prior to making any investment or financial decisions, any recipient of this document or the information should take steps to understand the risk and return of the investment and seek individualized advice from his or her personal financial, legal, tax and other professional advisors that takes into account all the particular facts and circumstances of his or her investment objectives.

Any prices stated in this document are for information purposes only and do not represent valuations for individual securities or other financial instruments. There is no representation that any transaction can or could have been effected at those prices, and any prices do not necessarily reflect UBS's internal books and records or theoretical model-based valuations and may be based on certain assumptions. Different assumptions by UBS or any other source may yield substantially different results.

No representation or warranty, either expressed or implied, is provided in relation to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information contained in any materials to which this document relates (the "Information"), except with respect to Information concerning UBS. The Information is not intended to be a complete statement or summary of the securities, markets or developments referred to in the document. UBS does not undertake to update or keep current the Information. Any opinions expressed in this document may change without notice and may differ or be contrary to opinions expressed by other business areas or groups, personnel or other representative of UBS. Any statements contained in this report attributed to a third party represent UBS's interpretation of the data, information and/or opinions provided by that third party either publicly or through a subscription service, and such use and interpretation have not been reviewed by the third party. In no circumstances may this document or any of the Information (including any forecast, value, index or other calculated amount ("Values")) be used for any of the following purposes: (i) valuation or accounting purposes; (ii) to determine the amounts due or payable, the price or the value of any financial instrument or financial contract; or (iii) to measure the performance of any financial instrument including, without limitation, for the purpose of tracking the return or performance of any Value or of defining the asset allocation of portfolio or of computing performance fees.

By receiving this document and the Information you will be deemed to represent and warrant to UBS that you will not use this document or any of the Information for any of the above purposes or otherwise rely upon this document or any of the Information.

UBS has policies and procedures, which include, without limitation, independence policies and permanent information barriers, that are intended, and upon which UBS relies, to manage potential conflicts of interest and control the flow of information within divisions of UBS (including between Global Wealth Management and UBS Global Research) and among its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates. For further information on the ways in which UBS manages conflicts and maintains independence of its research products, historical performance information and certain additional disclosures concerning UBS research recommendations, please visit <https://www.ubs.com/research-methodology>.

Research will initiate, update and cease coverage solely at the discretion of research management, which will also have sole discretion on the timing and frequency of any published research product. The analysis contained in this document is based on numerous assumptions. Different assumptions could result in materially different results.

The analyst(s) responsible for the preparation of this document may interact with trading desk personnel, sales personnel and other parties for the purpose of gathering, applying and interpreting market information. UBS relies on information barriers to control the flow of information contained in one or more areas within UBS into other areas, units, groups or affiliates of UBS. The compensation of the analyst who prepared this document is determined exclusively by research management and senior management (not including investment banking). Analyst compensation is not based on investment banking revenues; however, compensation may relate to the revenues of UBS and/or its divisions as a whole, of which investment banking, sales and trading are a part, and UBS's subsidiaries, branches and affiliates as a whole.

For financial instruments admitted to trading on an EU regulated market: UBS AG, its affiliates or subsidiaries (excluding UBS Securities LLC) acts as a market maker or liquidity provider (in accordance with the interpretation of these terms in the UK) in the financial instruments of the issuer save that where the activity of liquidity provider is carried out in accordance with the definition given to it by the laws and regulations of any other EU jurisdictions, such information is separately disclosed in this document. For financial instruments admitted to trading on a non-EU regulated market: UBS may act as a market maker save that where this activity is carried out in the US in accordance with the definition given to it by the relevant laws and regulations, such activity will be specifically disclosed in this document. UBS may have issued a warrant the value of which is based on one or more of the financial instruments referred to in the document. UBS and its affiliates and employees may have long or short positions, trade as principal and buy and sell in instruments or derivatives identified herein; such transactions or positions may be inconsistent with the opinions expressed in this document.

Options and futures are not suitable for all investors, and trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options". You may read the document at <https://www.theocc.com/about/publications/character-risks.jsp> or ask your financial advisor for a copy.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.

Within the past 12 months UBS Switzerland AG, its affiliates or subsidiaries may have received or provided investment services and activities or ancillary services as per MiFID II which may have given rise to a payment or promise of a payment in relation to these services from or to this company.
