This morning, Venture Global announced a strategic shift into the data center infrastructure business, anchored by power and grid frame agreements with GEV and BKR for up to 16, 720MW power island units and associated power transformer equipment. Management frames the platform as an "AI utility," with VG owning both power generation and data center assets, leveraging existing expertise to build targeted closed-loop, islanded operations adjacent to its existing facilities. The company expects to place its first power island purchase order by the end of 2026 and anticipates it can develop 10GW by 2034. Thoughts on VG: VG's track record of delivering LNG facilities ahead of industry standard timelines, supported by deep in-house EPC and power capabilities (building to ~4.5GW for LNG facilities), positions the company well in a data center market where speed to market is the main priority. However, limited visibility on financing and customer offtake is a key risk, particularly given yesterday's market reaction to CRWV. As such, while we believe the market meaningfully the nation's power supply shortfall amidst robust data center demand growth, we expect weakness today given the aforementioned risks. VG's current LNG growth plans remain unchanged. Thoughts on GEV: We think this news underscores that power remains the key bottleneck in the AI Datacenter build-out, which is encouraging the power providers to place very large orders with equipment suppliers such as GEV, with long lead-times.

- For VG, awaiting further color around customer and financing. We expect VG will own the power plants, data center buildings, and electrical systems while contracting out data center capacity with customers (we await further details on progress of discussions here). We expect VG to target long-term offtake with IG counterparties to secure project financing. We look for clarity on total capex, the cost of capital, and how rating agencies will treat the structure. We believe investors will want firm IG offtake and visible lease economics before giving the platform much value.
- Data center buildout builds on VG's existing power and construction expertise. VG already runs a ~3.6 GW islanded grid, expanding to 4.5 GW in the near term (not including today's announcement). With a sizeable in-house EPC team, experience in power plant development (despite initial setbacks), and consistent load swing management, VG offers an attractive angle to accelerating data infrastructure buildout. With today's announcement helping to secure significant turbine supply, we see switchgear as a key supply chain variable dictating the pace of data center capacity ramp.
- Additional deal details. VG's agreements establish a framework to reserve manufacturing capacity through definitive reservation agreements with agreed pricing and delivery terms, preserving flexibility on timing and scope. The company expects to place its first power island purchase order by YE26, with additional 720 MW combined-cycle gas turbine power island units and related electrical equipment to be ordered in stages as customer commitments, commercial arrangements, and deployment needs warrant.

See page 3 for analyst certification and important disclosures.

- Current GEV sentiment. Our conversations with investors in recent days suggest that many near-term investors are negatively positioned on GEV. This is due to concerns around slowing / declining orders in the 2H26 (after substantial GW orders have been booked over the LTM – there are concerns that there has been a substantial 'pull forward' of several years' worth of global Power market orders into 2026, especially on the behind-the-meter front), limited near-term EPS revision momentum vs some other AI-related names, and the high Year 1 valuation. In our view, this creates the potential for a bounce in the shares in the event of any positive news. We estimate overall GEV organic orders are down slightly y-o-y in Q326 and are down DD% in Q426; we think this decline is factored into investor expectations today, which was not the case 3-6 months ago.
- The agreement for GEV. The frame agreement for power and grid equipment could be worth up to 16 720MW power island units and associated transformer equipment, providing a 'pathway' for up to 10GW of new compute capacity, with the first power island purchase order to occur by the end of 2026. For context, GEV's total Power backlog at the end of June reached 53GW. The agreement should also yield orders for GEV's Electrification segment, where it is looking to take share in what is a much more fragmented global & domestic market than large Gas turbines. The potential scale of this deal helps to validate that GEV is becoming a very large player in non-GT electrical equipment markets, which is something that investors may not yet appreciate (we est. Electrification sales of $15bn in 2026).

J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:
J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com.
