VRT 3Q26 Earnings Review: Expectations? Consider them reset (Updating TP to $376)

Recap: Vertiv reported revenues of $4.3B in 3Q26, coming in ~$563M above the midpoint of guidance, representing organic growth of approximately 55%. Adjusted diluted EPS of $2.21 came in ~$0.41 above guidance. Adj. op. margin of 25.2% also came in ~70 bps higher than guidance. Growth was the big positive; VRT delivered a very strong print after the 2Q disappointment, while raising full-year guidance across all key metrics.

Supply chain / execution concerns alleviated: VRT delivered 55% organic growth in 3Q, alleviating concerns around its ability to execute on the back-half ramp in 2H26. Management highlighted improvements in supply chain / resiliency and continued capacity additions across regions and also announced the appointment of Michael Resha as the new EVP of Manufacturing, Logistics and Operational Excellence. Orders remain strong: Organic orders were up >100% YoY, with strength broad-based across customers / geographies; importantly, backlog timelines remain broadly unchanged at 12-18 months, suggesting customers are not simply ordering further out. Margins came in stronger: Adj. op. margin of 25.2% was ~70 bps above guidance and up ~290 bps YoY, despite continued investments in capacity. Full-year margin guidance was also raised ~20 bps to 24.0% at the midpoint. Liquid cooling / modular continue to gain traction: Mgmt. believes VRT is gaining share in liquid cooling as the market continues to shift towards LC, while involvement in NVIDIA's DSX POD / broader DSX AI Factory reinforces VRT's positioning in modular infrastructure. We think modular is still a small part of the broader backlog and has room to grow going forward.

Overall, we think this was a stellar print with very little to nitpick: execution improved and orders remained strong. Investors are naturally taking up their estimates; we have heard EPS numbers around $7.30 for 2026 with numbers approaching / exceeding $11.00 of EPS in 2027 (although we have also heard some investors closer to the $10.50 range).

DETAILS

RECAP OF NUMBERS

Vertiv reported revenues of $4,313 million in 3Q26, coming in ~$563 million above the midpoint of guidance, representing growth of approximately 61% year over year (55% organic) vs. $2,676 million in 3Q25. Adjusted diluted EPS of $2.21 came in ~$0.41 above guidance; this compares to $1.24 in 3Q25. Adjusted operating margin of 25.2% also came in ~70 bps higher than guidance and expanded ~290 bps year over year. The revenue number was particularly strong given the concerns coming out of 2Q around supply chain and VRT's ability to execute on the significant back-half ramp implied by guidance. 4Q EPS guide is $2.25 at the midpoint and revenue is $4,413 million at the midpoint, implying ~50% organic growth. For the full year, midpoint of revenue guidance is up $650M to $14.65B, with the full year EPS guide increased to $7.15 from $6.70 previously.

WHAT STOOD OUT TO US

Supply chain / execution concerns alleviated: This was probably the biggest positive from the quarter. Following the 2Q miss, the key question for us was whether VRT could actually execute on the revenue ramp embedded in 2H26, and 3Q restored confidence in the same. VRT delivered 55% organic growth, with Americas organic growth accelerating to 66%. Management highlighted definite improvements in the supply chain, continued investments in resiliency, and additional capacity across EMEA / India, while the Malaysia facility is now operational. Vertiv also discussed the appointment of Michael Resha (with lean manufacturing experience) joined as EVP of Manufacturing, Logistics & Operational Excellence with Anders Karlborg (outgoing Manufacturing Head staying on as Special Operations Project Leader to ensure a seamless transition).

Orders are strong: Organic orders were up >100% year over year in 3Q, while management described the pipeline as strong and expects another year of robust orders growth. Management indicated that the growth comes from a diverse mix of customers (hyperscalers / colocation / enterprise). Americas remains strong, EMEA continues to accelerate, and management specifically called out increasing demand / pipeline momentum in India, with Australia also seeing an increase in orders. The shape of backlog also does not seem to have changed materially, with orders still generally being placed around the 12-18 month timeline.

Margins came in stronger: Adjusted operating margin was 25.2%, ~70 bps above guidance and up ~290 bps year over year. Americas margins were 29.4%, APAC 17.0% and EMEA 28.0%. Full-year adjusted operating margin guidance is now 24.0% at the midpoint, ~20 bps higher than prior guidance and ~360 bps above 2025.

Liquid cooling / modular continue to gain traction: Management sounded confident around VRT's positioning in both liquid cooling and modular infrastructure. On liquid cooling, management said it is satisfied with the direction of the business, believes VRT is taking a bigger share and continues to see the market mix shift towards liquid cooling; this does not mean air cooling goes away, but it becomes a smaller portion of the total heat extracted from increasingly high-density racks. On modular, VRT highlighted its involvement across NVIDIA's DSX POD and broader DSX AI Factory design.

2027 setup looks positive: Management stopped short of giving formal 2027 numbers, but the qualitative commentary was positive. VRT expects continued significant above-market organic sales growth in 2027, reflecting robust backlog, strong pipeline visibility and sustained share gains, while it also expects continued margin expansion from productivity and commercial execution. Data center demand remains supported by global, multi-year, GW-scale buildouts.

CONCALL SUMMARY

Demand / orders

- Q3 organic orders >100% YoY; management expects another year of robust orders growth
- Strength is broad-based across hyperscalers / colo / enterprise, with management indicating that the growth is broad-based, also across geographies
- Pipeline remains strong across Americas / EMEA, with explicit commentary around India and Australia in terms of an increase in orders
- Order dynamics have not changed dramatically QoQ; backlog still generally reflects 12-18 month ordering timelines, which implies that customers have not been shifting orders out
- Management remains strict on what qualifies as backlog, i.e., a firm purchase order rather than broader pipeline

Supply chain / execution

- Management's answer to concerns after 2Q is best summed up as "the best answer is outperformance"
- ~$100-150M of delayed 2Q revenue filtered into 3Q, but management also saw definite improvements in supply chain execution during the quarter
- Continuing to build resiliency through greater inventory / capacity and expanded capacity agreements with key suppliers
- Capacity expanding across EMEA / India; Malaysia factory is now operational and capacity additions are already contributing to 3Q / 4Q growth

- Management acknowledged the learning ramp up curve is not over yet, particularly as many products are new to the industry, but expects continued improvement as processes mature

Improvement in execution

- Management emphasized that VRT is delivering strong results today while investing for tomorrow (vs. companies typically having to pick one or the other)
- Capex running at ~4% of 2026 sales as VRT builds capacity to support future growth outlook
- Incrementals were a little lower given product mix, but management remains focused on continued margin improvement
- Michael Resha (with lean manufacturing experience) joined as EVP of Manufacturing, Logistics & Operational Excellence with Anders Karlborg (outgoing Manufacturing Head staying on as Special Operations Project Leader to ensure a seamless transition)

Liquid cooling

- Management is satisfied with the direction of the liquid cooling business and believes VRT is taking a bigger share as the market mix shifts towards LC
- Management also remains satisfied with win rates
- Air cooling is not going away, but should represent a smaller portion of total heat extracted as rack densities increase

Modular / NVIDIA DSX

- VRT is a disclosed ecosystem partner for NVIDIA's DSX POD and broader DSX AI Factory design
- Management sees modular infrastructure increasingly moving towards reference designs that can then be configured using simulation / digital designing
- Management believes this architecture can help VRT expand share as the technology evolves
- The supply chain / manufacturing processes required for these products are increasingly unique to VRT; management believes the that learning ramp up here can be a source of long-term competitive advantage

800V DC

- No material change to the roadmap communicated in 2Q; management said the situation remains consistent and is pleased with the direction of travel
- Importantly, management believes market demand is evolving in the same direction as VRT's roadmap
- Product development cannot be separated from production capacity; management increasingly views industrialization as part of the product-launch process

Services

- Management continues to view services as an important differentiator for VRT
- No dramatic difference in attach rates between mechanical / electrical; increasingly thinking about services at the overall system level

Broader outlook for 2027

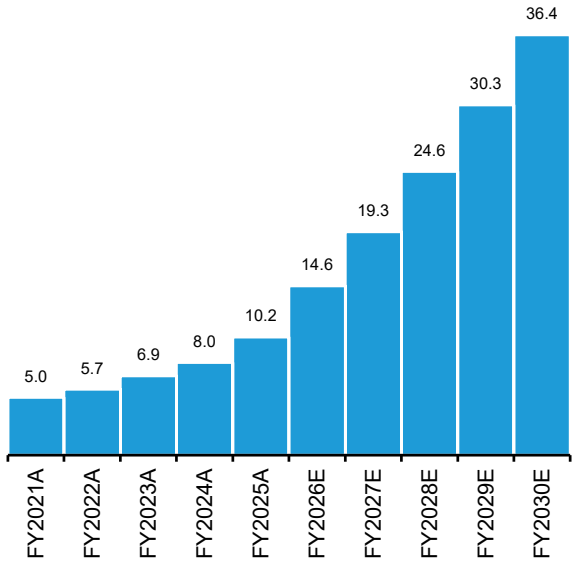

- Management expects demand to remain robust and another year of strong orders growth
- Pipeline / orders remain supportive despite the strong 3Q / expected 4Q revenue growth rates

- No evidence of unusual data center project pushouts; movements at the individual project level remain broadly consistent with what VRT has historically seen
- Continued capacity investments suggest VRT is preparing for growth beyond the current 2026 ramp

VALUATION METHODOLOGY

Vertiv Holdings Co

We value Vertiv at 24x NTM + 1 EBITDA of $6.1B to reach our target price of $376.

RISKS

Vertiv Holdings Co

Downside: (i) Efficiency increasing to the point where less cooling needed, (ii) Unexpected slowing of data center expansion, (iii) Faster than expected shift away from NVIDIA chips to custom silicon (impacts Vertiv because of strong relationships), (iv) Tech. shift away from DTC / 800 VDC if Vertiv can’t react fast enough
