Monthly Chartbook

Pan-European property chartbook. We publish this chartbook monthly. It includes performance statistics, stock valuation metrics, our property market assumptions, direct property market statistics and the latest macro data.

Key Takeaways

- European property sector was up 1% in June, but is flat year to date vs European equities up 9%.
- The UK has outperformed continental Europe in June, and also year to date.
- Sector trading at a 32% discount to NAV, 14x median PE.

Performance statistics. Our chartbook provides regional and sector-specific, absolute and relative performance statistics. The European property sector is flat year to date vs MSCI Europe up +9% (in euros). On a total shareholder return basis (including dividends), the property sector returned +3% vs MSCI Europe +11%. UK property stocks are up 4% year to date (in local currency), vs UK equities up +5% (UK equities largely driven by the energy sector). Retail and logistics are the best performing subsectors year to date, vs residential and self storage lagging.

Stock valuation metrics. The chartbook also includes long-term data series of key valuation metrics, such as discount to NAV, dividend yield, EPS yield and EBITDA/EV yield. The sector is trading at a 32% discount to NAV vs the historical average discount of 17%. NAV valuation dispersion has materially increased in the last few months and remains above the 10-year average in June. From an EPS yield perspective, dispersion is at an all-time low.

Detailed direct property market assumptions. In addition, we set out our assumptions for direct property markets across Europe, including rental growth, yield shift and capital growth. For 2026, we forecast a 3% capital value growth on average across the UK stocks we cover, vs 1% in Continental Europe.

Macro data. The chartbook includes data on GDP growth, bond yields, capital availability, inflation and currency moves, and how they correlate with property markets.

Direct property market statistics. We publish long-term data series for European office main property markets, including rents, values and yields, as well as e-commerce penetration and logistics rents.

A note on the Bloomberg volatility series

These series show the standard deviation of day to day logarithmic historical price changes for the names under our coverage. The 12-week price volatility shown equals the average annualised standard deviation of the relative price change for the 12 most recent trading weeks' closing prices on average, expressed as a percentage.

For example, assuming a stock trades at $100 and has a volatility of 30%, we can expect that within one standard deviation (or 68% of the time) the price will fall between a range of $70 to $130. Given the historical prices of the stock, historical volatility shows how variant the price has been over a specified time period.

Morgan Stanley uses a relative rating system using terms such as Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated or Underweight (see definitions below). Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold and sell. Investors should carefully read the definitions of all ratings used in Morgan Stanley Research. In addition, since Morgan Stanley Research contains more complete information concerning the analyst's views, investors should carefully read Morgan Stanley Research, in its entirety, and not infer the contents from the rating alone. In any case, ratings (or research) should not be used or relied upon as investment advice. An investor's decision to buy or sell a stock should depend on individual circumstances (such as the investor's existing holdings) and other considerations.
