Quantinuum (QNT) 2Q26: Marching forward to their goals

Quantinuum announced their Q2 FY2026 earnings after the market closed beating consensus on revenue and EPS and raising FY revenue guidance but missing slightly on Adjusted EBITDA. The results also included the IPO related costs including SBC that was triggered by the IPO. The stock was down slightly in the aftermarket. But the Quantinuum story is less about the near term numbers and more about the company's ability to deliver their 4th (Sol) and 5th (Apollo) generation quantum computers on schedule.

With the Sol being tested and prepared for delivery in ~ 1 year and the main hurdles cleared for Apollo in 2029 the company is making critical progress to maintain market leadership and capture a major portion of the market. Even on fidelity, where QNT leads, the new Quantum Error Correction code family pushes fidelity from 3-nines to almost 5-nines.

Oracle ordered a Helios server, which will be delivered later this year or early next year, to be installed in an Oracle OCI datacenter and tightly integrated into the OCI Cloud hardware and software environment to allow Oracle customers to design, develop and implement quantum computing software. This availability of a Quantinuum server in a major hyperscaler further validates the company's market leading position and production quality of its technology.

Investment Implications

Quantinuum (QNT, TP 95, Outperform): The results showed increasing validation of industry acceptance as did the Oracle partnership and order of a Helios server. Our Quantinuum thesis is based on the deliver on schedule of Sol and then Apollo servers and the steps taken during the quarter and the details given show that these are very much on schedule which will position Quantinuum not only as a market leader but as capable of capturing a major portion of the quantum computing market opportunity. We raise our TP from $94 to $95 as we raise estimates and lower EV/Sales from 155x to 115x looking through the near-term hypergrowth phase.

DETAILS

Quantinuum announced their Q2 FY2026 earnings after the market closed beating consensus on revenue and EPS but missing slightly on Adjusted EBITDA and raising full year guidance. The quarter also included all the costs relating to the IPO including stock-based-compensation that was triggered by the IPO. The stock was down slightly in the aftermarket. But the Quantinuum story is less near term about the numbers and more about the company's ability to deliver their 4th (Sol) and 5th (Apollo) generation quantum computers on schedule.

Quantinuum is in a race against private and public companies to deliver a high-fidelity (low error rate) quantum computer with hundreds of logical qubits capable of solving currently intractable problems. As discussed in our initiation note (Quantinuum: On the road to delivering on the quantum possibilities. Initiating with Outperform rating) we believe that Quantinuum has

1. Proven their ability to execute and deliver;
2. A reasonable roadmap for delivering a high-fidelity (low error rate) quantum computer with hundreds of logical qubits capable of solving currently intractable problems;
3. Their own optimized software stack including industry applications;
4. A consultant (Forward Deployed Engineer) model to help drive customer success.

While there are inherent risks, we believe the risk / reward is quite favorable for investors willing to wait as the technology matures. We base our assessment of the company on the likelihood they can deliver next year their ~100 logical qubit computer (SOL) and in CY29 a quantum computer with hundreds of logical qubits (APOLLO). The steps taken during the quarter increase our confidence that both Sol and then Apollo will be delivered on schedule.

This quarter's results while important and validating industry usage of the companies current and prior generation quantum computers via their revenue results and increased FY revenue guidance; showed that the company is making progress toward delivering their next generations of quantum computing. In addition, as discussed below the company showed, earlier than we expected, that they can increase the fidelity from 3-nines to near 5-nines which is an important technical step in delivering high fidelity quantum computing which is critical to production usage of Quantinuum's quantum computers.

KEY TAKEAWAYS FROM THE QUARTER

- Increased fidelity: When we launched on Quantinuum we discussed how the company was delivering 99.921% fidelity (exceeding the "Three Nines" threshold). Management announced they have increased that to near five-nines logical fidelity on Helios leveraging what the company explained is a novel Quantum Error Correction code family.
 - This is an important step as high fidelity results is key to the production usability of any quantum computer. Many of Quantinuum's competitors focus on how many Qubits they can deliver but without the high fidelity, we believe, that is critical to production use of quantum computers.
 - With this improvement in fidelity, which was tested and proved in the lab and will be delivered to existing system, Quantinuum can deliver higher fidelity or deliver more logical qubits or a combination depending on the requirements.
 - The new code family will be documented in an upcoming peer reviewed article which is very much consistent with Quantinuum's design
- Delivering Sol and then Apollo: Key to our Quantinuum thesis is the company delivering Sol in 2027 and then Apollo in 2029 (Exhibit 2) as well as improving the fidelity of the technology. The company made incremental steps in these directions and validated that Sol and Apollo are both on schedule.
 - It is important, we believe, for investors to understand how the different generations of Quantinuum's quantum computers inter-relate and how each step in the journey de-risks the next step and the next product. Sol was the 1st 2-D Qubit trap with Apollo (expected in 2029) a bigger Sol using a larger chip size to hold more qubits than Sol. Lumos, which is the next generation uses multiple tiles of Apollo style chip to build a larger and larger scale.

- Management explained that even though Sol is the next generation R&D is working simultaneously on the design, implementation and technical issues of Apollo, Lumos and beyond. For example, the company is testing in the lab the use electrostatic energy to move qubits between tiles - a critical path item in building Lumos. This will eliminate the need for quantum networking - a big step forward in scaling quantum computing.
- Progressing towards the launch of Sol in 2027: The company announced that with Sol's trap chip back from fabrication and advancing through product validation the company is making progress toward the CY27 launch of Sol. We believe that the launch and availability of Sol in CY27 is a key milestone and look forward to more details.
- Management explained that Sol was about a year away. The Sol chip is in the lab and being tested, validated and integrated. Once this is completed it will move into the production phase.
- Apollo: The company reiterated that Apollo remains on schedule for 2029. The company explained that significant progress was made across key architectural subsystems through prototyping. Management explained that the Apollo design is completed and is it leverages the same 2-D chip design but at a larger size.

- Nexus adoption: The company had 150 organizations using Nexus (Quantinuum's management layer and contains the major components necessary to develop and support quantum computer software development and operations) at the time of the IPO. One quarter later the number grew to 180 to build new quantum applications. The growth was not simply research organizations or government organizations, rather Quantinuum is signing up enterprise customers across all their key markets.
- The increase was not just in organization, it was, management explained. in the increase in usage of Nexus to solve real world problems.
- The development ecosystem also expanded QoQ with the launch of Guppy Playpond, a web-based environment set up for developers to learn writing and testing code in Guppy, to increase adoption of this next-generation quantum programming language.

ORACLE PARTNERSHIP

Quantinuum and Oracle announced a strategic partnership in which Oracle is purchasing a Helios Quantum Computer which we understand will be delivered in the coming months and will drive meaningful revenue for Quantinuum next year. Note Oracle is acquiring the Helios system.

- The acquisition by Oracle of a Helios server is, we believe, a major validation of Quantinuum's technology and at the same time a meaningful expansion in the breadth of offerings in the public Oracle Cloud.
- A Helios quantum computer will be installed in Oracle's OCI infrastructure with a preview expected with the coming months. This will be an on-premise install at OCI and available through the Cloud. The close installation and tight integration remove complexity and performance barriers to using the quantum computer by developers.
- This will be the 3rd delivered Helios server with one installed in Quantinuum's datacenter and one being delivered to Singapore.
- The two companies will work to integrate Helios with existing OCI compute, networking, storage, identity, and data services under the same governance and OCI access controls customers already use.
- The planned OCI quantum service is expected to combine Quantinuum's development stack with support for Oracle infrastructure as well as open-source hybrid-programming frameworks, helping developers build, test, and refine quantum-classical applications more efficiently.
- From an Oracle perspective this gives Oracle increased functionality and offerings parity / advantage compared with other hyperscalers that have some quantum computing offerings in their Cloud IaaS/PaaS. With Quantinuum supporting more logical qubit what developers leveraging Oracle OCI will be able to do could be greater than at Oracle's peers.

The availability of Quantinuum hardware and software within the Oracle OCI infrastructure expands the availability of Helios to more potential customers and accelerates overall development and adoption of quantum computing and Quantinuum's offerings. We also see it as expanding the depth of Oracle OCI's functionality beyond that of many traditional hyperscaler competitors. We will be watching to see how closely this is leveraged by Oracle OCI AI customers, especially their AI Labs customers including OpenAI.

RESULTS

- 2Q26 Revenue was driven by growth in cloud, and was roughly equal split between US and non-US.
- 2Q26 Bookings were $4.3 million. When including Oracle and other deals that closed after 2Q, YTD bookings reached $81M. Given the visibility management further guided to at least $120M bookings for FY2026.
- Profitability impacted by one-time IPO related expenses: 2Q Stock Based Compensation was particularly high driven by an IPO related trigger on equity grants given to employees when the company was private, resulting in a catch-up expense recognition in Q2. $6.3M out of the $10.3M of COGS was from SBC, and another $2.8M from purchased intangibles related to the 2021 acquisition of Cambridge Quantum Computing. Non-GAAP GM which excluded these items was 62%. Longer term, the company expects GM to be north of 50%.
 - Additionally, the SBC cost account for $295M of $367M in R&D, $17M of $29M in S&M and $129M of $152M of G&A this quarter. Besides the IPO related impact, the company is also in the investing phase on all fronts, concurrently investing in 4 generation of systems from Helios to Lumos (R&D), expand GTM (S&M), and expansion of required functions of a public company including finance, legal, compliance and investor relations (G&A)
- After the IPO in June, the company ended 2Q26 with approximately $2.1 billion of cash and equivalents.

As the company grows we hope that management is going to incorporate into their disclosures more details on the revenue mix, backlog, RPO and even CRPO. We also hope that the more detailed 10-Q will be available on the earnings night as this detail will be helpful, we believe, to investors.

GUIDANCE

Quantinuum issued its first FY26 guidance:

- Total revenue of $28-32M
 - Company also expects FY27 revenue growth to exceed 100%
- Additionally, management expects to achieve $120M+ in bookings this year

Management also stated that Sol and Apollo are on-schedule and that Sol will be available in H2 2027.

VALUATION METHODOLOGYQuantinuum Inc.

We value Quantinuum shares based on our estimate for 12-month forward Revenue in 1 year's time ($218M), and apply an EV/Forward Sales multiple of 115x. We then add back the net cash, and divide by share count of 279M, arriving at price target of $95.

Oracle Corp

We value Oracle shares based on our estimate for 12-months adjusted EPS in 1 years' time ($15.22) and apply an adjusted P/FE multiple of 24.5x. We then add back in the net cash per share, (-$47.6 per share), arriving at price target of $325.

RISKSQuantinuum Inc.

Downside risks to our price target for QNT include: 1) it could take longer for Quantinuum to execute and deliver the next generations of quantum computers (SOL and APOLLO); 2) the engineering / manufacturing problems are more intractable than expected; 3) a breakthrough occurs with one of the other quantum particle based modalities (e.g. topological, semiconductor, etc.); 4) a competitor is able to accelerate their roadmap and substantially beating Quantinuum to market and is able to take more of the market than expected; 5) the market size is smaller than the industry experts expect; or 6) it takes longer for Quantinuum to convert their pipeline of business to revenue.

Oracle Corp

Risks to our target price for ORCL include: customer concentration risk, AI Winter scenario where Gen AI fails globally, decreased database sales due to increased pressure from cloud and alternate databases; Slower than expected adoption of SaaS ERP; cybersecurity or other concerns that decrease demand for Cloud; lower than expected demand for Oracle's Autonomous Database and Oracle Multi-Cloud database; OCI growth issues especially at Sovereign Clouds.

RATINGS DEFINITIONS, BENCHMARKS AND DISTRIBUTIONEQUITY RATINGS DEFINITIONS*Bernstein brand

The Bernstein brand rates stocks based on forecasts of relative performance for the next 12 months versus the S&P 500 for stocks listed on the U.S. and Canadian exchanges, versus the Bloomberg Europe Developed Markets Large and Mid Cap Price Return Index EUR (EDME) for stocks listed on the European exchanges and emerging markets exchanges outside of the Asia Pacific region, versus the Bloomberg Japan Large and Mid Cap Price Return Index USD (JPL) for stocks listed on the Japanese exchanges, and versus the Bloomberg Asia ex-Japan Large and Mid Cap Price Return Index (ASIA) for stocks listed on the Asian (ex-Japan) exchanges - unless otherwise specified.

The Bernstein brand has three categories of ratings:

- Outperform: Stock will outpace the market index by more than 15 pp
- Market-Perform: Stock will perform in line with the market index to within +/- 15 pp
- Underperform: Stock will trail the performance of the market index by more than 15 pp

Coverage Suspended: Coverage of a company under the Bernstein research brand has been suspended. Ratings and price targets are suspended temporarily, are no longer current, and should therefore not be relied upon.

Not Rated: A rating assigned when the stock cannot be accurately valued, or the performance of the company accurately predicted, at the present time. The covering analyst may continue to publish research reports on the company to update investors on events and developments.

Not Covered (NC) denotes companies that are not under coverage.

Bernstein brand stock ratings are based on a 12-month time horizon.

Autonomous brand – common stocks

The Autonomous brand rates common stocks as indicated below. As our benchmarks we use the Bloomberg Europe 600 Financials Price Return Index (E600BK) and Bloomberg Europe Dev Mkt Financials Large and Mid Cap Price Ret Index EUR (EDMFI) index for developed European banks and Payments, the Bloomberg Europe 600 Insurance Price Return Index (E600IN) for European insurers, the S&P 500 and S&P Financials for US banks and Payments coverage, S5LIFE for US Insurance, the S&P Insurance Select Industry (SPSIINS) for US Non-Life Insurers coverage, the Bloomberg Emerging Markets Financials Large, Mid and Small Cap Price Return Index (EMLSF) for emerging market banks and insurers and Payments, and the Bloomberg Japan Financials Large & Mid Cap Price Return Index (JPFILM) for Japanese Financials. Ratings are stated relative to the sector (not the market).

The Autonomous brand has three categories of common stock ratings:

- Outperform (OP): Stock will outpace the relevant index by more than 10 pp
- Neutral (N): Stock will perform in line with the market index to within +/- 10 pp
- Underperform (UP): Stock will trail the performance of the relevant index by more than 10 pp

Coverage Suspended: Coverage of a company under the Autonomous research brand has been suspended. Ratings and price targets are suspended temporarily, are no longer current, and should therefore not be relied upon.

Not Rated: A rating assigned when the stock cannot be accurately valued, or the performance of the company accurately predicted, at the present time. The covering analyst may continue to publish research reports on the company to update investors on events and developments.

Those denoted as 'Feature' (e.g., Feature Outperform FOP, Feature Under Outperform FUP) are our core ideas.

Not Covered (NC) denotes companies that are not under coverage.

Autonomous brand common stock ratings are based on a 12-month time horizon.

Autonomous brand – preferred stocks

The Autonomous brand has three categories of preferred stock ratings:

- Outperform (OP): The total return of the preferred instrument is expected to outperform preferred securities of other issuers operating in similar sectors or rating categories over the next six months.
- Neutral (N): The total return of the preferred instrument is expected to perform in line with preferred securities of other issuers operating in similar sectors or rating categories over the next six months.
- Underperform (UP): The total return of the preferred instrument is expected to underperform preferred securities of other issuers operating in similar sectors or rating categories over the next six months.

Autonomous preferred stock ratings are based on a 6-month time horizon.
