

Hong Kong Equity Strategy

Accumulating Through the Policy Noise

MSCI HK's July rally paused in August, with offshore taxation measures triggering a sentiment-driven pullback MTD. However, we see limited evidence of a meaningful deterioration in capital flows, earnings expectations or macro fundamentals. China's actions are better viewed as part of a broader global shift towards offshore wealth transparency than a cross-border mobility tightening (Figure 1). Historically, Hong Kong fund inflows to the asset and wealth management industry have been driven by investment opportunities, not policy headlines, and we expect AI-led capital formation, a robust tech listing pipeline, and an attractive offshore yield premium to remain structurally supportive (Figure 2). As for trading strategy, we recommend accumulating MXHK through the current policy noise, as the momentum is likely to build as tech leadership moderates (see our late July call for tech recovery in August). Beyond the near-term trading horizon, we expect MXHK to attract strategic allocation flows in 2H26, supported by improving GDP and EPS revisions, attractive valuations, and an incremental rotation towards Value and Quality under JPM's business cycle framework (Figure 30). Unlike the highly concentrated AI vs. non-AI trade seen in 2Q, investors we spoke with are shifting towards a more diversified exposure following July's sharp deleveraging (Figure 24). We remain OW Financials and Real Estate, funded by UW Consumer Discretionary. Our top picks are HKEX and BOCHK (capital markets leverage, NIM expansion, high yield), Techtronic (AI-adjacent upside optionality and resilient US demand), and Swire Prop / Link REIT (property upcycle, prefer landlord over developers). Into the 1H26 results season, we see limited scope for broad results-led earnings upgrades, given only around half of MXHK constituents have historically beaten or met consensus. We believe Financials look best positioned to deliver upside surprise (Figure 13).

- Hong Kong fund inflows have historically been driven by investment opportunities, not policy changes. To address concerns that the cross-border policy actions could weigh on capital inflows into HK, our analysis suggests fund inflows into Hong Kong's asset and wealth management industry have historically tracked China growth equity performance, as proxied by ChiNext Index. As shown in Figure 2, strong inflow cycles have coincided with periods of compelling alpha generation, such as the liquidity-driven rally in 2020, the new-energy boom in 2021, the policy pivot in 2024, and the AI trade in 2025. Looking ahead, the combination of AI-led investment opportunities and growing tech listings should continue to support robust inflows to HK despite recent taxation measures. In addition, the widening onshore-offshore yield differential remains an important structural tailwind (Figure 3). With the CGB 10Y yield now trading ~3% below US 10Y treasury yield - near multi-decade extremes - we think offshore WM products offer a compelling return advantage over onshore alternatives.
- Offshore taxation: formalizing offshore wealth governance, not restricting capital mobility. We view China's recent offshore taxation initiatives, including enhanced scrutiny of offshore trusts and the taxation of HK insurance investment gains, as the execution follow-up of Regulations on Outbound Investment to formalize the framework governing offshore wealth, rather than a broad-based restriction on capital mobility. JPM's financials team sees limited fundamental impact from these measures. Insurance is more directly exposed than banks, but much of the regulatory risk is in the price, while Hong Kong insurance products remain competitive given higher after-tax returns than for onshore peers. For banks, cross-border wealth income remains relatively immaterial, with MCV-related wealth and insurance revenues accounting for only ~2% group revenues for HSBC and STAN. For HK property, future taxation scrutiny is likely to be concentrated among ultra-high-net-worth individuals (<2% of HK property sales are purchased via entities under Mainland Chinese-owned offshore trusts). Figure 4 & 5 show MXHK indices and relevant stocks' forward EPS continue to be revised up against the new policy moves. Overall, we think the recent measures should be viewed as enhancing transparency and tax compliance, rather than impairing Hong Kong's role as an offshore wealth hub.

- China is not an outlier: OECD-led CRS 2.0 is reshaping the global framework for offshore wealth taxation. From a global perspective, China's recent taxation initiatives should be viewed within a broader OECD-led transition toward greater tax transparency and worldwide income enforcement. Under the CRS 2.0, global tax systems are shifting from focusing on where assets are booked to identifying who ultimately owns and benefits from those assets. Over the past two years, several major jurisdictions have moved in the same direction. For instance, the UK abolished its long-standing non-domicile regime and shifted toward residence-based taxation, and Singapore, BVI and Cayman have formally committed to implementing CRS 2.0 and CARF frameworks. In our view, China's recent policy actions therefore reflect a broader global migration from offshore asset opacity towards offshore income transparency and taxation, rather than a uniquely China-specific tightening cycle.
- A two-track policy approach: supporting corporate globalization while tightening oversight of individual offshore wealth. As we argued previously, the key policy overhang is increasingly concentrated on individuals' offshore wealth and asset holdings, particularly against the backdrop of rising pressure from domestic fiscal condition and improving data collection backed by AI and CRS 2.0. By contrast, the policy stance towards corporate and institutional "going global" activity remains supportive (e.g. HK IPOs, supply-chain diversification, overseas expansion and national competitiveness). Notably, on July 17, SAFE announced a new round of easing measures, including streamlined reviews for outbound fund remittances and cross-border financing (esp. for tech). The policy distinction between institutions and individuals underlines our preference for 2B over 2C stock picks since July (when we swapped our top pick from AIA to BOCHK).
- Trading strategy: tactical patience ahead of a late August/early September re-entry. We view the recent correction following the offshore taxation regulations as primarily a sentiment shock rather than a fundamental drag. Both GDP and forward EPS revisions remain on an upward trajectory, with little evidence thus far of deterioration in either macro conditions or earnings expectations. Meanwhile, MXHK is trading at an attractive valuation of 14.0x FTM P/E, or 0.4SD below its 10-year mean. We recommend accumulating MXHK through the current policy noise, as the momentum is likely to build as tech leadership moderates and global earnings catalysts begin to fade (see our late July call for a tech recovery in August). We do not expect the HK earnings season to be a major market mover, given that MSCI HK constituents have historically generated limited positive earnings surprises during reporting periods (Figure 13 to Figure 18). For strategic allocation in 2H26, we see two additional tailwinds for MXHK: first, JPM's regional business cycle indicators have moderated from Expansion to Slowdown in 2Q26, a backdrop that incrementally favored more Value and Quality Growth; and second, following the sharp Momentum unwind in July, investors we spoke with are increasingly seeking portfolio diversification to hedge the concentration risk.

Company-Specific Disclosures: J.P. Morgan does and seeks to do business with companies covered in its research reports. As a result, investors should be aware that the firm may have a conflict of interest that could affect the objectivity of this report. Investors should consider this report as only a single factor in making their investment decision. Important disclosures, including price charts and credit opinion history tables (if applicable), are available for compendium reports and all J.P. Morgan-covered companies, and certain non-covered companies, by visiting <https://www.jpmm.com/research/disclosures>, calling 1-800-477-0406, or e-mailing research.disclosure.inquiries@jpmorgan.com with your request.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock’s expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts’ coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst’s coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan’s Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
