New expansion plan springs a surprise

Upgrade to Buy on spillover demand and pricing flow-through, but continue to monitor new factory executions

Action: Upgrade to Buy on improving fundamentals with a higher TP of TWD472, implying ~21% upside ITEQ's 2Q26 GM was higher than our and Bloomberg consensus estimates at 22% (+10.6pp q-q, +6.4pp y-y; Fig. 1), supported by the fall-through of pricing adjustments, in our view, as we estimate ITEQ could have lifted ASP by 25-30% q-q during the quarter. We project another ~20% ASP growth in 3Q26F to primarily back 22% q-q revenue growth in 3Q26F and expect further uptick in GM to a record 25.2%. As discussed in our 6 March update report, we think ITEQ should continue gaining share in M4/M6 grade CCL because leading peers already have busy AI project pipelines, leaving the company well-positioned to monetize the demand spillover especially within the significantly growing general servers (report; mostly M6 thus far). Although the revenue headroom remains dictated by how much E-glass supply ITEQ could secure and the c.25% supply gap will likely persist, we think the pricing actions and improving mix are steering its GM toward a healthier range and model 22.4%/24.1% in 2026/27F vs. 14.5% in 2025. We, thus, lift 2026/27/28F EPS to TWD16.7/26.2/27.4 (Fig. 2) from TWD8.2/11.7/13.8 and upgrade ITEQ to Buy given a much stronger earnings power against the current industry shortage backdrop. Our new TP of TWD472 is based on 18x 2027F EPS of TWD26.2 (vs. 25x 2027F EPS of TWD11.70 earlier). Our new target multiple is in line with ITEQ's historical trading average of 8-36x, and we lower the multiple to discount the medium-term uncertainty over the utilization of new capacity planning in Wuxi and Thailand, where we have to monitor the ramp-up profiles closely as they are likely tied with material supply status and customer engagement commitments. The stock currently trades at 15x 2027F EPS. Downside risks include: 1) weaker-than-expected demand for server/auto/consumer and 2) unexpected share losses in server/auto.

Announces a new factory plan in Wuxi

ITEQ announced its plan to invest CNY2.13bn over 2026-29E to build a new factory in Wuxi which could accommodate 2.85mn of sheets of monthly capacity when it is fully ramped up by 2029E, and the site is slated to start operations from 2027E. Together with the Thailand factory expansion announced in May (600k sheets/month; report), the two projects could add 60% more capacity vs. end-2026E, according to management.
