ASML Q3 2026: Pricing powers the next upgrade cycle

ASML delivered another solid quarter and, more importantly, commented on further capacity expansion and price raise. We believe this will drive another round of earning upgrades.

More capacity in 2028 and beyond. ASML sees the previous plan of 30% increase in 2027/28 across EUV/ArFi as not enough to meet the strong customer demand, and are looking to expand capacity in 28 and beyond. While some investors may be disappointed with the lack of 2027 capacity upside, and without specific 2028 unit #, we believe the strong outlook even beyond 2028 should be taken more positively. Some customers have already started discussing 2029/30 demand.

Pricing upside. With the negotiation finished, ASML will raise prices for new orders across all critical products (we read as EUV and ArFi) and services, with some effect in 2027 and full effect in 2028. While some of the price increase will need to go to capacity ramp, the majority will flow through to the bottom line. We believe this is a much bigger driver to EPS - recent news report said ASML is raising parts prices by 10%.

Margin uplift. 3Q margin at 57.5% was 230bps above consensus; 2026 full year margin at 56% is expanding by 315bps YoY. Margin expansion is driven by upgrades (not only latest EUV but across all EUV and DUV products), bigger scale and product mix. Going forward, there will be bigger margin upside from pricing.

Raising 28 EPS to €84. We lift 2027/28 revenue to €57/76bn (from €56/72bn), GM to 56.4%/58.9%, on slightly higher shipment and pricing (and hence margin). Our 2028 EPS is raised to €84(from €75), and we are 19% above consensus. With future clarity on volume and pricing, we believe there is room for further upside. Our PT is kept unchanged at €2,500 as we lower multiple to 30x 2028 EPS, a midcycle P/E.

DETAILS

We updated our ASML, EUV and DUV models by incorporating management's comments in Q3 2026 earnings. Models can be downloaded here (ASML.NA / ASML Holding NV; EUV Model; DUV Model).

Q3 RESULTS SUMMARY

Q3 2026 revenue was broadly in line with consensus at EUR 11.7Bn, increasing 25% sequentially and reaching the high end of guidance, supported by higher system shipments and exceptionally strong IBM revenue. Margins were the key highlight of the quarter, with GM reaching 57.5% and OpM 44.4%, both ahead of street on favorable mix, higher volumes and stronger upgrade activity. EPS came in at EUR 12.93, ~21% above consensus, aided by a EUR 500Mn revaluation gain related to ASML's investment in Mistral AI.

- Q3 topline reached EUR 11.7Bn, up 25% sequentially and 55% YoY, broadly in line with consensus and supported by strong execution of ASML's capacity ramp. Net system sales reached EUR 8.4Bn, while Installed Base Management revenue came in at EUR 3.3Bn, almost EUR 400Mn above guidance, driven by strong customer demand for productivity upgrades (Exhibit 1, Exhibit 2).
    - EUV system sales reached EUR 4.1Bn, up 10% sequentially and roughly doubling YoY. ASML recognized 17 EUV systems during the quarter, including 1 High NA system (Exhibit 3). DUV system sales reached EUR 4.3Bn, reflecting robust demand across both immersion and dry systems. Management also highlighted continued momentum in holistic lithography products and shipped the first YieldStar 550B metrology system designed for advanced logic and DRAM nodes.
    - Installed Base Management (IBM) sales reached EUR 3.3Bn, significantly above guidance, driven by exceptionally strong demand for productivity upgrades across both EUV and DUV platforms. Management noted that upgrades remain a structural growth opportunity as customers continue to optimize throughput and maximize output from existing installed tools
    - Looking at the geographic and end market breakdown, Q3 system sales at EUR 8.4Bn were split between Logic at 54% and Memory at 46%. China increased to 23% of total system sales after two quarters below the 20% level, while Taiwan was the largest contributor at 31% and Korea represented 31% (Exhibit 4).
- Q3 margins were exceptionally strong, with GM at 57.5%, 230bps above street at 55.2%, and OpM at 44.4% versus consensus of 42.2%. The GM beat was primarily driven by the strength of the IBM business, particularly high margin EUV and DUV productivity upgrades. Management also highlighted favorable product mix, strong low NA EUV sales, higher immersion volumes and operating leverage from increased shipments as additional contributors to profitability. EPS reached EUR 12.93, around 21% above consensus thanks to a EUR 500Mn revaluation gain related to ASML's investment in Mistral AI (Exhibit 5).
- ASML highlighted several important High NA milestones during Q3. Intel announced it has processed more than 1 million wafers using High NA EUV systems, while Samsung and TSMC announced plans to introduce High NA into high volume manufacturing in 2028 and 2030, respectively. Management also noted that availability across the existing High NA fleet is now approaching 90%, supporting broader adoption going forward. In addition, ASML and TSMC launched an industry initiative to develop larger 12 inch EUV photomasks, targeting a pilot line by 2031. The company also reiterated that High NA technology is continuing its transition from development into production environments.

EXHIBIT 1: ASML reported a strong Q3, with revenue broadly in line with consensus, driven by higher shipments and stronger IBM. GM (57.5%) and OP beat expectations on favorable mix and upgrades, while EPS was ~21% above street, aided by a Mistral AI revaluation gain

Q4/FY26 GUIDANCE AND LT OUTLOOK

Q4 and FY 2026 guidance

- ASML guided Q4 sales in the range of EUR 14.2 to 15.2Bn, with a midpoint of EUR 14.7Bn, well above street at EUR 14.0Bn, implying 26% QoQ growth. Management expects IBM revenue of ~EUR 3.7Bn, up from EUR 3.3Bn in Q3, supported by continued strength in upgrade activity. While Q4 GM guidance of ~57% was above expectations versus consensus at 56.2%, it is guided broadly flat to slightly down sequentially despite materially higher volumes, as the benefits from operating leverage, favorable mix and IBM growth are largely offset by capacity ramp related costs and supply chain investments (Exhibit 6).

- ASML raised FY26 revenue guidance from EUR 43-45Bn to EUR 44-45Bn, increasing the floor by EUR 1Bn and implying 35% to 38% YoY growth, and guided GM at 56% at the high end of the previous range. The new guidance remains above consensus of EUR 43.8Bn revenue and 54.3% GM. Management reiterated that EUV remains the primary growth driver, expected to grow more than 45% YoY, while non EUV system sales are expected to grow around 20% and IBM around 50% YoY. ASML also reiterated that China should remain around 20% of total FY26 revenue despite the significantly larger revenue base (Exhibit 7).

More capacity in 2028 and beyond

- ASML highlighted that the previously communicated roadmap of ~30% capacity growth in both EUV and immersion DUV for 2027 and 2028 is no longer sufficient to meet customer demand. Management stated that customer visibility continues to improve, with customers now expecting supply shortages to persist through at least 2028 and already discussing requirements for 2029 and 2030.

- As a result, ASML is actively working with its supply chain to expand capacity beyond the previously discussed plans of 30% YoY, particularly for 2028 and beyond where additional capacity opportunities remain available.

- While some investors may be disappointed by the lack of specific 2027/28 units upside, we believe management's comments around demand extending beyond 2028 and the need for further capacity expansion should be viewed positively. Importantly, these comments apply to both EUV and immersion DUV. Management also indicated that customer forecasts are supported by detailed fab construction plans and significant downpayments.

Pricing upside

- Management indicated that value based pricing negotiations have now been completed and described the outcome as positive. ASML will increase pricing on its most critical products and associated upgrades and services, reflecting the growing value delivered through higher productivity, yields and accuracy.

- Due to the existing backlog, there will be no impact in 2026 and only a partial benefit in 2027, with the full impact expected from 2028 onward. While some of the incremental pricing will be used to support the capacity ramp across ASML and its supply chain, management indicated that the vast majority should be accretive to gross margins. We continue to believe pricing represents a much larger long term EPS opportunity than currently reflected in consensus estimates.

Demand remains exceptionally strong

- Management noted that customers continue to secure greater long term visibility from their own end customers and increasingly expect demand to outpace supply through at least 2028. Order momentum continues to strengthen, with rising discussions around 2028 deliveries and increasing customer interest in placing orders for 2029 and 2030. ASML also highlighted that order commitments are supported by meaningful downpayments and detailed customer expansion plans.

- Regarding Terafab, management noted that while Terafab is now included in customer capacity planning for 2028 and beyond, the initial deployments involve only a limited number of systems. Customers first establish and qualify R&D and pilot production lines before committing to larger scale manufacturing, creating an early demand signal that provides ASML with improved visibility into future capacity requirements and production ramps.

EXHIBIT 6: Q4 guidance exceeded street expectations with revenue of €14.2-15.2bn driven by system shipments and IBM growth. GM of ~57% was ahead of expectations on favorable mix and volumes, supporting OP above cons.

MODEL UPDATES

To reflect the guidance revision for 2026, increased capacity expansion, particularly in 2028, and improved visibility on 2029/30 demand, we have raised our revenue estimates over the next five years, with the largest upgrades occurring toward the end of the decade. We increased our forecasts across both system sales and IBM, with the most significant upward revisions in EUV. We now expect revenue to grow at a 25% CAGR over 2025–30E. We remain well above consensus across the next five years and across all three segments: EUV, DUV, and IBM.

We have raised our revenue forecasts while maintaining our gap versus consensus for FY27–FY30, reflecting increased capacity expansion, particularly in 2028 where capacity is now expected to grow by more than 30% YoY, as well as improved visibility on 2029/30 demand (Exhibit 8, Exhibit 9):

- EUV: While we did not materially change our EUV estimates for 2026/27, as ASML reaffirmed its 45% YoY EUV growth outlook for 2026 and indicated limited scope to expand capacity beyond 85 units in 2027, we increased our estimates for 2028 and beyond. The upside is driven entirely by higher pricing, which ASML expects to be fully reflected from 2028 onwards. We kept our 2028 LNA unit assumption unchanged at 110 units, implying potential further upside should ASML increase capacity by more than 30% (Exhibit 10).

- DUV: Similar to EUV, we have revised our estimates primarily for 2028 and beyond to reflect stronger pricing for immersion tools and slightly higher unit assumptions for 2029/30, supported by improved demand visibility and continued robust capacity expansion in China. We have been more bullish than consensus on DUV for some time, and ASML's substantial capacity expansion supports our view that strong EUV demand from advanced logic and DRAM will also drive significant growth in DUV (Exhibit 11, Exhibit 12).

- IBM: Given the substantial increase in the installed base of tools over the coming years, combined with a stronger-than-expected upgrade cycle, we have slightly raised our IBM estimates and remain considerably above consensus over the next five years. We expect IBM revenue to grow at a 23% CAGR, more than doubling to ~€23bn by 2030. Management highlighted upgrade business growth as sustainable despite ~50% YoY IBM growth in 2026, supported by a large upgradeable installed base and a robust pipeline of productivity-enhancing hardware and software upgrades across both EUV and DUV (Exhibit 13, Exhibit 14).

On margins, we have revised upward our profitability expectations, reflecting the strong 2H26 margin profile, with GM already above 57%. Looking ahead, we expect a more favourable mix over the next two years, driven by higher EUV sales, an improved LNA mix with a greater contribution from next-generation tools, increased immersion shipments, and a larger upgrades business, all of which are margin accretive. In addition, we expect pricing upside. Supported by both these factors and operating leverage, we now forecast 2030 GM well above 60% and OpM above 50%.

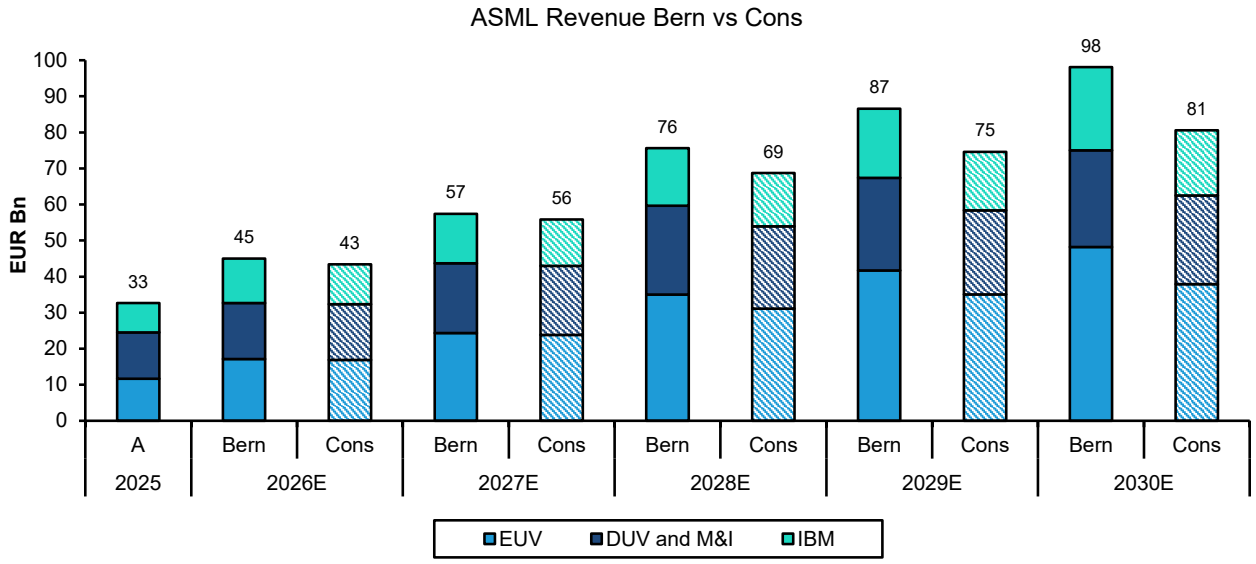

Consequently, our EPS estimates have increased significantly and remain consistently above street expectations over the next five years, with our forecasts 20% above consensus in 2028 and 40% above consensus in 2030. We maintain our price target of €2,500, as we lower multiple to 30x 2028 EPS, a midcycle P/E. (Exhibit 15, Exhibit 16, Exhibit 17, Exhibit 18).

EXHIBIT 8: We've revised upward our revenue estimates over the next five years across both EUV/DUV and IBM. Capacity is now expected to increase by 30% in 2027 and by more than 30% in 2028. As a result, our 2028 EPS forecast is 19% above consensus.

VALUATION METHODOLOGY

ASML Holding NV

For ASML, we apply a 30x P/E multiple to our Q5-8 EPS estimate to get a rounded PT of €2,500. For the ASML US listing we apply the EUR/US$ exchange rate to get to a rounded PT of USD 2,859.

RISKS

ASML Holding NV

Downside risks to our price target for ASML include margins coming below expectation because of the higher cost to commercialise EUV and advance EUV to new generations, larger than expected China over-stocking, weaker than expected WFE market, slower technology migration and the threat from other technologies in the long run, and further tightened export control on China customers.
