Low bar this earnings season as deceleration appears priced
S&P 500 3Q earnings appear to be setting up against a low bar, with nearly 70% of companies expected to deliver slower EPS growth than in 2Q. Revisions remain unusually strong, with estimates up 1.8%, including 3.6% for Tech+ and 0.8% for ex-Tech+. Median EPS growth is expected to moderate to 9.1% from 14.6% in 2Q, but the median stock has derated 7% since the start of 2Q reporting, suggesting the deceleration is already priced. S&P 500 earnings are expected to grow 26.3% y/y and could finish close to 30% based on the historical beat of approximately 3%. That would mark the second highest growth rate since 4Q21, behind only last quarter.

Tech+ continues to drive growth
Tech+ revenue growth is expected to remain robust at 31.1% y/y in 3Q, broadly in line with 30.7% in 2Q, while EPS growth is projected to decelerate to 46.7% from 54.2%.

- Semiconductors continue to lead, with EPS growth expected to reach 130%. Tech + ex-Big 6 EPS growth is projected to accelerate sharply to 100.4%, with Micron already contributing 5.6pp to S&P 500 EPS growth. S&P 500 EPS growth y/y for 3Q ex-MU, NVDA, AVGO, SNDSK is 13.5%.
- UBS expects hyperscaler cloud revenue to grow 60% y/y in 3Q, accelerating from 50% in 2Q and ahead of consensus at 56%. Over the N4Q, UBS expects cloud revenue to reach $574bn, ~15% above consensus and ~73% growth vs L4Q.
- Big 6 EPS is expected to grow 22.4% (NVDA: 89.0%, MSFT: 14.4%, GOOG: 6.5%, AAPL: 5.5%, AMZN: 1.8%, META: -10.3%).

S&P 500 ex-Tech+ growth is expected to decelerate, but remain positive
Full year 2026 EPS growth expectations for ex-Tech+ have risen 7pp since June, compared with a typical decline of approximately 1pp, though consensus still expects a deceleration. S&P 500 ex-Tech+ EPS is projected to grow 14.6% in 3Q, well below the 24.8% delivered in 2Q. All 11 sectors and 73% of S&P 500 companies expected to deliver positive EPS growth, though Telcos and Staples are the weakest at just over 3%. Margins are expected to contract across Staples, Utilities, Telcos, Health Care, REITs, Financials and Industrials ex-BA. Excluding Tech+ and Energy, S&P 500 EPS growth falls to 7.0% y/y.

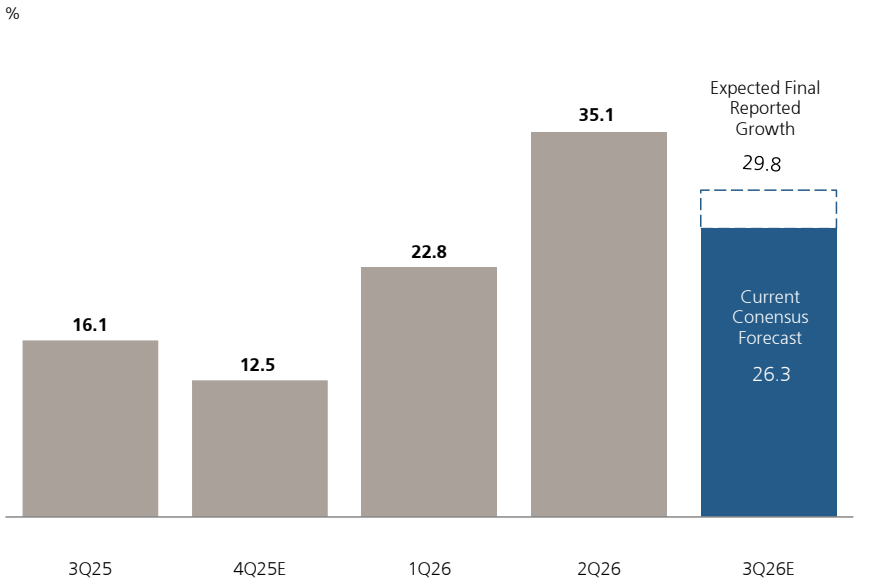

Analyst stock survey for earnings season surprises
We leverage data from the UBS Quantitative Research Review (link) to identify stocks with potential upside or downside around earnings. The survey translates UBS lead equity analysts' forward looking views into standardized scores that capture short horizon expectations for positive or negative surprises versus consensus. The survey covers 762 stocks in our liquid universe, including 740 yet to report. We screen for companies with the strongest positive and negative surprise scores, then overlay UBS Quant crowding data and valuation scores from our R.E.V.S. framework. This process identifies 40 stocks that screen positively and 20 that screen negatively for an earnings surprise. GEN, MTDR, AJG, KTB and SARO have the strongest positive setups, while DOW, ES, EVR, ADP and GPK screen most negatively.

Gamma Rentals framework from our derivatives strategists
While single stock volatility has moderated from the extreme levels seen during Q2 reporting, earnings revision volatility remains near five year highs and index correlations remain exceptionally low. Consistent with this macro backdrop, our derivative strategists' Gamma Rentals highlights opportunities in Tech, Financials, Materials and Energy as the most attractive sectors in which to own pairwise volatility into earnings.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

Equity market returns are influenced by corporate earnings, interest rates, risk premia, as well as other variables influenced by the business cycle. The outlook for any and all of these variables is subject to change.
Risks include macroeconomic variables (such as GDP growth rates and inflation), economic slowdown, a weakening currency, global economic events, and government policy changes. Our quantitative models rely on reported financial statement information, consensus earnings forecasts and stock prices. Errors in these numbers are sometimes impossible to prevent (as when an item is misstated by a company). Also, the models employ historical data to estimate the efficacy of stock selection strategies and the relationships among strategies, which may change in the future. Additionally, unusual company-specific events could overwhelm the systematic influence of the strategies used to rank and score stocks. Past performance is not a guarantee of future performance. Valuation methods across sectors include DCF, SOTP and multiples analysis.
Options, structured derivative products and futures (including OTC derivatives) are not suitable for all investors. Trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "The Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options." You may read the document at http://www.theocc.com/publications/risks/riskchap1.jsp or ask your salesperson for a copy. Various theoretical explanations of the risks associated with these instruments have been published. Supporting documentation for any claims, comparisons, recommendations, statistics or other technical data will be supplied upon request. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchases and sales of options, such as spreads and straddles. Because of the importance of tax considerations to many options transactions, the investor considering options should consult with his/her tax advisor as to how taxes affect the outcome of contemplated options transactions. All options discussed in this report are OTC options.
