July WSTS: Seasonal M/M Downtick Skewed by Memory Lumpiness; Industry Sales Outlook Now > $1.7T in 2026 and >$2T in 2027

The WSTS (World Semiconductor Trade Statistics) released its latest set of industry data late last week, showing that total industry sales fell to $142B (-10% M/M) in July, with Y/Y growth decelerating to +129% Y/Y, down from +143% Y/Y in June. The weakness in sales was primarily ASP-driven, with blended industry ASPs declining -9% M/M, and total industry unit volumes remaining ~flat M/M. The M/M decline in sales was directionally in-line with seasonal trends and heavily skewed by monthly lumpiness in memory sales (total semiconductor sales ex-memory were ~flat M/M). We would also separately flag that company commentary across our sector over the last ~90 days points to demand continuing to accelerate from current levels, and thus we contend that fundamentals will likely follow suit. Our key takeaways from the latest set of data are as follows:

- The M/M decline in July was in-line with seasonal norms... Historically, semiconductor sales tend to decline -8% M/M in the month of July, which should partly contextualize the -10% M/M decline in the Jul-26 data. That said, the decline was slightly larger than expected due to greater month-over-month lumpiness in memory, with total industry sales ex-memory remaining ~flat M/M, versus total industry sales including memory being down -10% M/M.
- Prior-month data revised higher, reflecting stronger memory data points... While it isn't unusual for the WSTS to revise prior-month data, we would flag that aggregate industry sales for Jun-26 were revised ~4% higher to $157B, up from the $152B figure that was initially reported. Memory data points for June were adjusted meaningfully, with DRAM and NAND sales both being revised ~6% higher, further illustrating the strong and durable underlying economic setup across the memory space.
- Memory pricing growth decelerated but remains objectively strong... Memory revenues fell to $78.6B in July (down from a record $94.0B in June), driven by weaker bit shipments and partially offset by stronger pricing. For context, DRAM and NAND bit shipments fell -23% M/M and -22% M/M, while ASPs grew +6% M/M and +9% M/M, respectively. When viewed on a Y/Y basis, pricing trends decelerated, with DRAM ASPs growing +259% Y/Y (down from +268% Y/Y growth in June) and NAND ASPs growing +344% Y/Y (down from +368% Y/Y growth in June).

Upon updating our industry model, we now see the industry growing to $1.73T (+118% Y/Y; +32% Y/Y ex-memory) in 2026 and >$2T in 2027. However, there is likely upside risk to our estimates, as we conservatively assume seasonal growth across all major product categories (ex-memory, where our team uses a more granular, bottom-up approach). All told, despite the M/M downtick in the data, we believe that underlying fundamentals and Y/Y growth trends remain highly constructive, and we continue to view compute (NVDA, AVGO, AMD, INTC, MRVL), memory (MU, SNDK), networking (AVGO, MRVL, ALAB), and industrial analog (TXN, ADI, MCHP) as the most favorable verticals levered to the incremental growth in spending.

Investors should consider this report as only a single factor in making their investment decision. Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
