Anything to expect from the Five-Year Plan & Policy Address?

The Chief Executive of the HKSAR Government will announce Hong Kong's first Five-Year Plan & Policy Address on 16 September (Wednesday). For the private housing market, we do not expect any meaningful supportive measures (as home prices have already grown 12% YTD), nor do we anticipate significant tightening (given softer market momentum over the past 2 months, there is no urgency). Although not our base case, we do not completely rule out further stamp duty hikes for luxury homes (for example, the threshold for the higher 6.5% stamp duty rate may be lowered from units valued at >HK$100 million to, say, >HK$50 million). Even if this occurs, we expect the impact to be manageable (after a higher stamp duty rate was imposed for units valued at >HK$100 million in February 2026, sales momentum has remained strong so far). As for the Five-Year Plan, we believe the focus will be on measures to accelerate the development of the Northern Metropolis (beneficiaries: Henderson Land / SHKP) and attract talent. Directionally, they should be supportive of sustaining home demand in Hong Kong. That said, in the near term, we expect HK developers' stock prices to be primarily driven by the interest rate outlook. This, together with the uncertainty around ODI (report), may cause developers to underperform in the near term, until rate-hike expectations ease. We prefer landlords (Swire Prop, Wharf REIC & Hongkong Land).

- Will there be additional policy tightening for the housing market? In the earlier Budget Speech in February 2026 (report), the government surprised investors with a stamp duty hike for homes valued at >HK$100 million (from 4.25% to 6.50%), contributing an additional HK$1bn of income to the government. We believe it was meant to compensate for the stamp duty revenue loss (HK$0.4bn) from the previous easing of stamp duty rates for units valued at <HK$4 million (i.e., a redistributive fiscal policy). Since February, sales momentum of homes valued at >HK$100 million has remained strong (+79% Y/Y by primary volume - Figure 1), and thus the impact on luxury homes has proven to be minimal. In the upcoming Policy Address, we do not expect significant policy tightening (e.g. reintroduction of additional stamp duties for non-local buyers), as there have been more signs of moderation in the private housing market (lower secondary sales, prices staying range-bound - more in our report), and thus we don't see any urgency for the government to introduce new tightening measures yet. That said, we do not completely rule out the possibility of imposing a higher stamp duty rate for luxury homes (even if not in the upcoming Policy Address, this remains a possibility in the Budget Speech in 1Q27, in our view). For example, the stamp duty rate for units valued at >HK$100 million might be further raised from 6.5% to >7%, or the threshold for the higher 6.5% rate (typically 4.25% is the highest) may be lowered to include units valued at, say, HK$50 million (which account for 1% of volume but 16% of value - Table 3). However, even if true, we expect a modest impact on sentiment among luxury homes, which may be more affected by the well-being of HK's financial markets, rates & ODI. Separately, we assign a small (but not zero) probability to additional measures that target discouraging non-local buyers, particularly as the recent measures on outbound investment (ODI) by the Chinese government do not seem to aim to specifically crack down on Mainland Chinese buying residential properties in Hong Kong (although global taxation is possible, this is not within the scope of HK's Policy Address - more discussion).

- What are stakeholders proposing? Table 1 summarizes the key proposals/suggestions from various stakeholders (e.g. industry organizations & political parties). The key housing-related ones are: (1) allowing residents to withdraw a portion of MPF to buy first homes; (2) further relaxing the investment cap on residential properties in the New Capital Investment Entrant Scheme (new CIES) (currently capped at HK$15 million for homes valued at HK$30 million); (3) reducing the government rates (差餉) from 5% to 4%. Among all these proposals, we see a slightly higher likelihood of relaxing the investment cap on residential properties for the new CIES, as this is more intended to attract talent to settle in Hong Kong. However, we believe the impact on the housing market is likely to be limited. As of February 2026, among the 1.7K approved cases of the new CIES, real estate only accounts for <3% of investment assets (Table 5). As for the various proposals to boost tourism in Hong Kong (e.g. relaxing the duty-free allowance for tourists from Mainland China) (Table 2), we believe some measures are possible, but we think they alone may not necessarily give a strong boost to tourism (and thus retail sales).
- The first Five-Year Plan may lay out more specific strategies for developing the Northern Metropolis & attracting talent: Earlier this year, the government conducted a public consultation on the first Five-Year Plan for Economic & Social Development (government website), which lists out the six major directions: (1) accelerating Northern Metropolis Development; (2) economy, finance & trade; (3) innovation & technology; (4) people's livelihood & social development; (5) development of regional cooperation; (6) integrated development of culture, sports & tourism etc. From the perspective of the housing market, we believe investors' focus would be on the strategies to achieve stronger population growth (and thus boost home demand) by attracting more talent. In particular, HK's birth rate remains weak (by mid-2026, HK's annual births dropped below 30,000 for the first time). We believe the two areas of focus will be: (1) more housing supply through Northern Metropolis / urban renewal: we expect the government to call for acceleration of farmland resumption, and thus developers with more farmland reserve (e.g. Henderson Land & SHKP) may benefit (Table 6). Within urban areas, we think the government may also propose acceleration of urban redevelopment. For example, the Bonus Plot Ratio Scheme (link) may be expanded to more districts. This may benefit HK developers focused on urban renewal (e.g. Henderson Land); (2) attracting talent: this may involve a stronger push for the various talent schemes, relaxation of criteria for new CIES, establishment of more international schools, expansion of universities & tax benefits.

Stakeholders' proposals for Policy Address 2026

Table 1: Proposals by various stakeholders regarding the housing market

Type	Party	Proposals regarding real estate sector
Industry organisation	The Chinese General Chamber of Commerce 香港中華總商會	Streamline planning procedures in the Northern Metropolis and allow greater land-use flexibility
Political party	Business and Professionals Alliance for HK 香港經濟民生聯盟 (經民聯)	1) Abolish progressive government rates (差餉) for residential properties and permanently reduce the standard government rates percentage from 5% to 4% 2) Further relax New CIES residential-property rules: lower the qualifying property price from HK$30mn to HK$20mn or remove it, and raise the amount countable toward the investment requirement from HK$10mn to HK$15mn 3) Introduce a tax allowance for owner-occupied private-home purchases and raise the tax-deductible limit for home-loan interest payments 4) Launch an MPF First-home Purchase Scheme
	Democratic Alliance for the Betterment and Progress of HK 民主建港協進聯盟 (民建聯)	Relaunch the Tenants Purchase Scheme by selling public rental housing units aged 20–30 years. Pricing should target monthly instalments at about twice the average rent, with est. ASP ~HK$1mn
	HK Federation of Trade Unions 工聯會	Establish a Building Maintenance Authority; use 39 Tenants Purchase Scheme estates as a pilot.
	Liberal Party Hong Kong 自由黨	Establish a Northern Metropolis Investor Entry Scheme requiring at least HK$20mn of new investment, including HK$10mn invested in physical shops or operating companies
Professional organisation	HK Institute of Surveyors 香港測量師學會	Raise the minimum flat-size requirement for new land grants above the current 26 sq. m. threshold
Housing organisation	Hong Kong Federation of Public Housing Estates 公屋聯會	Lower the down-payment requirement for White Form buyers to 5% (current: 10%)

J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
