In August 2026 global passenger xEV (BEV + PHEV) sales reached 1.76M which was flat growth y-o-y. China accounted for 58% of global xEV sales followed by Europe on 19%, RoW 16% and N. America at 7%. Readers can download the EV tracker data set here: Link . YTD growth in EV sales is 4% relative to our forecast 10% EV sales growth for 2026 implying a much stronger 2H is required to hit our estimates. We expect global xEV penetration to reach c.32% in 2026, up from 28% in 2025.

Rest of world and Europe are the fastest growing regions for EV demand, while the China show continued decline (-10% YoY) and the US records its sharpest decline of 2026. EV sales in China reached 1.0M units in August, -10% yoy following subsidy reductions. European EV sales grew to 335K units (+23% YoY), while RoW kept strong momentum with sales growing at 81% YoY to 272K units (16% of global). US EV sales fell 40% yoy to 123K units, marking the sharpest monthly yoy decline in 2026. Growth in the EU and RoW fully offset the declines in the U.S. and China.

Globally, pure BEV sales remain strong while PHEV are experiencing declining sales volumes. For August, BEV sales increased by 8% YoY to 1.26M units while PHEV sales declined -17% YoY to 481k units. BEV sales account for the majority of sales in all markets accounting for 70% of China xEV sales, 72% for Europe, 81% for U.S and 80% for RoW.

Among the OEMs, BYD, Tesla and Geely continued to lead sales, although BYD posted a YoY sales decline. In August, BYD (based on SNE data) led the market with 274K units (-18% YoY) followed by Tesla with 137K units (-15% YoY), Geely with 99K units (-6% YoY) and Leapmotor with 94K units (75% YoY) For European brands, BMW was strongest with 34K units (-13% YoY)and VW sold 34K units (-10%YoY)

Battery demand continues to outstrip EV demand as OEMS opt for larger sized batteries and the mix shift towards BEV's. Li-ion battery demand for passenger EVs increased 9% YoY to 98GWh this month which was better than xEV sales. Battery sales in China were 55.8GWh (10% YoY vs. EV sales -10% YoY), Europe was 18.6GWh (+25% YoY), N. America was 8.9GWh (-43% YoY). Growth in EV battery demand YTD is 15% and in line with our target of 15%.

SVOLT, CATL and Gotion posted the fastest growth in battery sales 2026 YTD but CATL continues to lead on market share which has 38% YTD (vs. 36% in 2025). In August, CATL sold 35.0GWh (+17% YoY, 35.9% M/S). BYD remained second with 17.9GWh (7% YoY, 18.1% M/S), LGES at 7.9GWh (-22% YoY, 8.2% M/S). Panasonic down to 3.6% M/S (3.6GWh, -27% YoY). SDI down to1.7GWh (-55% YoY, 1.3% M/S).

LFP market share increase to 57% this month (8% YoY, +5% MoM) During the month, NMC accounted for 43% of global xEV installations, down from 51% last year, while LFP increased from 49% to 57%. In China, LFP increased to 77% (72% last year). Ex-China LFP reached 31% (16% last year), indicating continued expansion of LFP.

DETAILS

With the mid-point of the year being reached, EV sales growth has been below expectation, but battery sales for EVs in line with what we expected. While growth was negative in the first two months of the year, March to August has seen a turnaround and a resumption to growth with global EV sales flat 0% y-o-y and YTD growth of 4% vs. our FY forecast of +10%. At the same time, battery demand increased by 9% in August with 15% growth YTD, vs. our expectation of 15% for the year. We remain of the view that over the coming months growth to accelerate as higher gasoline prices prompt more and more consumers to buy an electric vehicle. In China, which has the highest EV sales penetration among major markets, EV demand declined a 10% yoy in August 2026, improving from a 14% yoy decline in 1H26. We attribute the improvement to stabilizing economic conditions and persistently high oil prices, which supported EV demand and partly offset the impact of reduced subsidies, including the replacement of the full purchase-tax exemption with a 50% exemption. US EV sales remained under pressure following the removal of the CVC credit last September, recording their sharpest decline of 2026 at 43% yoy in August. After five consecutive months of growth from the January low, sales fell sharply again in August. However, as the tougher comparison following the credit removal begins to normalize from September, we expect the yoy decline to bottom out, although full-year demand will likely remain flat to negative. Elsewhere, the picture is more positive. Demand in Europe accelerated to (+23% Yoy), while Rest of the World growth accelerated to (+81%) making it the fastest growing region globally. South East Asia and South America are now some of the fastest growing regions, with South America EV sales up a staggering triple-digit 188% in August. Li-ion battery demand for passenger EVs also increased 9% y-o-y to 98GWh in August, outpacing xEV sales as batteries continue to become cheaper and larger. Among the major battery producers, CATL and SVOLT delivered the strongest growth. Within our coverage, LGES reported an -22% y-o-y decrease while Samsung SDI sales fell -55% y-o-y. CATL maintained its industry-leading position with 17% y-o-y growth and keep its overall market share to 38% which is the highest market share of any battery company by a wide margin.

Energy storage: 2025 was an extraordinary year for energy storage companies with significant out-performance across the value chain. While EV sales were robust (2025 xEV battery demand increased by 25% y-o-y), the upside surprise was the strength in ESS. We think energy storage companies can continue to do well in 2026, although not the same level of gains as last year given higher expectations. Within the sector, CATL-A (Outperform, CNY770) is the most attractive stock with leading margins and returns. We also rate Tianqi Outperform (HKD65 for H-share and CNY80 for A-share, Outperform) on a potential lithium price recovery in 2026. For Korean stocks, the near term could remain challenging given exposure to the US. While Korean companies had invested heavily in the US EV battery capacity, demand has not materialized as expected leading to underutilization and operating losses. While Chinese companies have been taking share in Europe, the recent KRW10tn contract award by SDI with Mercedes-Benz shows that there is still potential. In the meantime, Korean battery makers are pivoting toward ESS to help drive growth as part of the data center boom in the US. While there is clearly long term potential we also expect that the next 6–12 months will remain challenging and valuations now fully reflect the upside potential. We rate Samsung SDI, LGES and LG Chem Market-Perform and rate Posco Future M and EcoPro BM at Underperform.

Chinese Autos:
Overseas markets are increasingly important for Chinese OEMs amid muted domestic demand, and ASEAN stands out as a key growth opportunity given its strong market fundamentals and significant EV potential. Cultural affinity, supportive policies, and geographic proximity provide a favorable backdrop for expansion. Chinese brands have been among the biggest beneficiaries of ASEAN's EV transition, leveraging strengths in electrification, smart cockpits, and ADAS features that resonate with young ASEAN consumers. Similar consumer preferences have also allowed Chinese OEMs to replicate much of their China EV playbook and, combined with close geographic proximity, accelerate expansion across the region. As a result, BYD has rapidly emerged as the region's EV leader, while Geely could also be well positioned through its longstanding partnership with Proton in Malaysia. Beyond competitive products, however, success will increasingly depend on execution, particularly in distribution, after-sales service, and local manufacturing, as localization becomes a growing priority across the region. (For our 2026 outlook, please refer to: China Autos: Mid-Year Check-In; Exports cushion Domestic weakness, BYD and Xiaomi model updates*)*
We maintain a cautious outlook for the sector overall. The reduction in subsidies have slowed market momentum, following strong demand pulled forward into 2024-2025 and a high comparison base, while macro headwinds and weak consumer sentiment persist. We expect industry wholesale volumes to reach c.29 mn units, representing -2-4% yoy growth. We forecast domestic retail demand of 19-20mn units, declining 15-17% yoy. Exports should remain a growth driver, arriving at 9.5-10mn units, growing 50-60% yoy. The long term secular growth outlook for EVs remains intact and outperform the broader market even though EV transition has come to the mass adoption phase in China, we forecast domestic EV sales growth will be c.-3-5% yoy for 2026 and drive EV penetration to 60%. EV exports is going from strength to strength and projected to grow c.90-100% yoy in 2026, bringing overall EV wholesale shipment to +15-17% yoy. We believe competition within the domestic market will remain intense and overseas markets are increasingly important as a strategic growth opportunity. For our EV names, we rate BYD and Xiaomi Outperform, and XPeng, Li Auto, and NIO Market-Perform. Within our traditional Chinese OEMs coverage, we

rate Geely Outperform and Great Wall, GAC, and SAIC Market-Perform. (For our latest monthly tracker, please refer to: Chinese Autos: Weak gets weaker — August domestic sales -22.7% YoY, EV penetration 63.1%; Export + 67.1% YoY*)*

India Autos: August was a useful first read on EV demand after the expiry of the e-2W subsidy window at end-August. Retail momentum slowed initially as buyers and dealers waited for clarity during the first 10 days of the month, but demand recovered once the subsidy was renewed for a further two years. Even so, e-2W and e-4W volumes moderated sequentially from August's high base, while remaining sharply higher YoY. The key message is unchanged: EV adoption is broadening and the market is moving to a meaningfully higher run-rate, although August also shows that policy visibility still matters at the margin.

Japan Autos & Auto Parts: The mid-to-long term xEV transition for Japanese automakers remains a sector-wide challenge as they are still in early stages of BEV expansion. However, market position in HEV will support top-line growth in the near term and the 'multi-pathway' approach carried out by selective automakers should allow agile positioning in volatile market conditions. We believe xEV (including HEV, PHEV, BEV, FCEV) sales penetration (as % of total vehicle sales) to pickup supported by HEVs in the near term, BEVs in the long term with Japanese automakers projected to have ~296 xEV models in their lineup by FY3/31 (vs ~118 models as of FY3/24). We expect Japanese automakers' xEV sales penetration to reach 73% by 2030 (HEV sales penetration of ~34%, BEV sales penetration of ~23% by 2030). From the perspective of the xEV transition, we rate Toyota as Outperform, recognizing it as the most competitive player with strong presence across all powertrains — a global leader in HEVs, collaborating on BEV platforms within its alliance, and at the forefront of FCEV development. Suzuki also earns an Outperform rating, well-placed to benefit from the expanding Indian market, and showing a steady, moderate outlook in its xEV transition efforts. We rate Toyota and Suzuki Outperform; Honda Market-Perform; Nissan, Mazda, and Subaru Underperform.

For auto parts, we rate Toyota Tsusho as Outperform because it is involved across the entire automotive supply chain, from upstream to downstream. From an xEV perspective, the company is positioned to fully capture the benefits of Toyota's electrification, as it participates from lithium production to component supply and vehicle distribution. Denso (Market-Perform) will most likely benefit from xEV/SDV transition. Toyota's production recovery and HEV demand rebound could be the near term tailwinds for Aisin (Market-Perform), but we are more cautious on its long term xEV transition capabilities.

European Auto Parts (Tyres). EV adoption is a tailwind to the tyremakers, as EVs require larger, more technical tyres due to their higher weight and torque. Premium tyres are a key profit pool for the tyre industry, particularly in the high-margin Replacement channel (which typically follows OE production with a lag of 2-3 years). Premium tyres drive mix shift, margin and interestingly valuation. In our view, recent slowdown in EV adoption in North America and China (albeit with recent signs of a sequential recovery in China) is a small headwind to the tyremakers, but premiumisation will continue to be driven by SUVs and high-end vehicles in the meantime. While our coverage have good market share in premium tyres in China, North America and Europe are larger profit drivers so a reacceleration of EV penetration in Europe is a positive. Replacement tyre demand continues to be strongest in >18" premium segments implying strong demand from the installed base of EVs sold in the last 3-4 years. We rate Michelin and Pirelli Outperform, Bridgestone and Continental Out-Perform

The data we use comes from various sources and our analysis looks at registration and sales (by OEMs and countries) figures from multiple sources. The database is updated on a monthly basis with a one-month lag. For China, the volumes reflect retail vehicle registrations and excludes overseas exports.

5. EV BATTERY DEMAND (PASSENGER EVS): 2026YTD PASSENGER EV BATTERIES VOLUMES ARE UP 15% Y-O-Y TO 723GWH

MONTHLY PASSENGER EV BATTERY VOLUMES 9% YOY TO 98GWH (LIB ONLY)

- CATL (OP, PT CNY770) retains its leading position, with monthly installations of 35.0GWh LiBs (+17% YoY) based on passenger EV production (377GWh in 2025, +27% YoY). CATL's market share of xEV PV batteries was 38.0%

in 2026YTD (2025: 36.4%). CATL has a supply deal with Tesla to 2025 and have been deploying LFP and M3P batteries across all Tesla's standard range vehicles globally. CATL has also started mass production of its next generation Qilin battery (CTP 3.0) in 2023. The Qilin battery can achieve a pack energy density of 255Wh/kg using NCM and 160Wh/kg for LFP which is higher than most commercialized EVs in the market today. In addition to Qilin, CATL has also started mass production of the world first fast charging 12C LFP batteries called Shenxing at the early of 2025 with EVs equipped with Shenxing early 2026. CATL will continue to deploy M3P and Na-ion batteries to the market since the product launch in 2026.

- LGES (MP, PT KRW351,000) LiB monthly sales for passenger vehicles were 7.9GWh, -22% YoY (108GWh in 2025, +12% YoY). LGES's market share of xEV PV batteries was 9.8% in 2026YTD (2025: 10.5%). LGES primary installations are being driven primarily by the Tesla Model 3 and Model Y, VW's ID.4 and ID.3, and Renault's Zoe (Exhibit 31 to Exhibit 34). Battery recalls and production halt of GM Bolt in 2021 have impacted sales in 2022. Sales growth have returned with start up of new Ultium JV plants in 3Q22. LGES has a JV with GM, Stellantis to build battery cell manufacturing plants and supply batteries to these OEMs in the US (240GWh of capacity in the US by 2025) which should benefit from the US IRA.

- Panasonic (Covered by Kengo Makita, MP, PT4500 JPY) delivered 3.5GWh of LiBs in the month, -28% YoY (44GWh in 2025, +28% YoY)
  (Exhibit 35 to Exhibit 36). Panasonic's market share of xEV PV batteries was 4.1% in 2026YTD (2025: 4.3%). Starting from 2020, Tesla's new Shanghai Gigafactory stopped using Panasonic's battery for Model 3 in China (replaced with LGES and CATL). Panasonic and has a JV with Toyota under Prime Planet Energy & Solutions (PPES) which produces prismatic cells.

- BYD (OP, PT HKD130) LiB sales for passenger EVs were 17.7GWh in the month, 7% YoY (185GWh in 2025, +24% YoY) (Exhibit 38 to Exhibit 41). BYD's market share of xEV PV batteries was 16.2% in 2026YTD (2025: 17.9%). In May 2021, BYD announced that it will equip all its EVs with in-house batteries in a move aimed at expanding its battery business – the company have started selling its batteries to other companies starting 2H21.

- Samsung SDI (MP, PT KRW520,000) LiB sales were 1.3GWh in the month for passenger EVs, -55% YoY (28GWh in 2025, -3% YoY) (Exhibit 42 to Exhibit 45). SDI's market share of xEV PV batteries was 2.1% in 2026YTD (2025: 2.8%). Samsung SDI has formed a JV in the US with Stellantis and GM for productions starting in 2025/26. The company will also supply batteries to Hyundai starting 2026.

EXHIBIT 18: Monthly total passenger battery sales for xEV (BEV + PHEV) were at 98GWh (9% YoY) (YTD: 723GWh, +15% YoY)

6. EV TRENDS IN INDIA

EV Volume trends

E-2W Volumes: E-2W registrations rose to 203K units in September, up 85% YoY and 13% MoM from August's 180K. Growth was led by TVS, Bajaj and Hero, while Ola remained the only major player to decline YoY

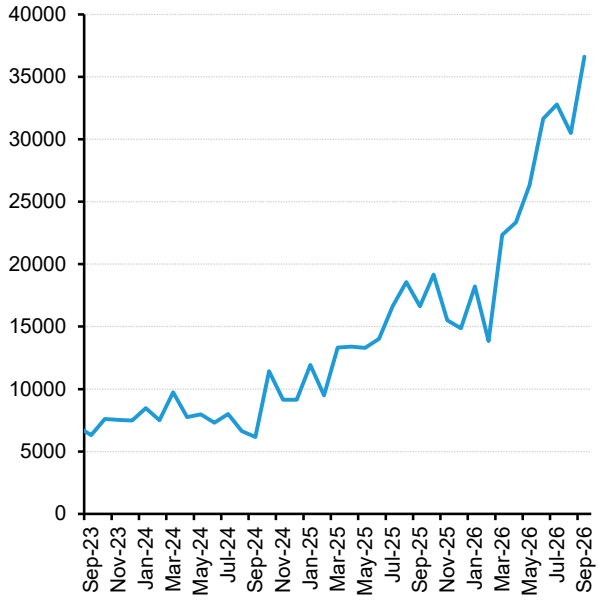

E-4W Volumes: E-PV registrations reached a record 35.9K units in September, up 94% YoY and 11% MoM from August. EV penetration rose to 8.3% of passenger vehicle registrations, compared with 7.6% in August. April-September registrations reached 192K units, up 89% YoY, while the first-half run-rate points to more than 380K e-PV registrations in FY27. The improvement reflects higher acceptance, greater product availability and a stronger festive-season demand backdrop.

Market Share Trends
E-2W

E-2W market leadership continued to consolidate around the established manufacturers. TVS retained the top position with 54.0K units and a 26.5% share, although its lead narrowed as Bajaj grew faster. Bajaj registered 48.4K units, up 17% MoM, increasing its share to 23.8% from 22.7% in August and bringing the gap with TVS down to just 5.6K units. Ather remained third with 30.5K units, but its share eased to 15% as its growth trailed the market. Hero's Vida was the strongest mover among the top five, with volumes up 27% MoM and share rising to 11.9%. TVS, Bajaj, Ather and Hero together accounted for around 76% of the top-25 market, while TVS and Bajaj alone captured nearly half. Ola's structural decline continued: volumes fell 3% YoY and its share dropped to 6.6%, versus 12.6% a year earlier.

E-4W

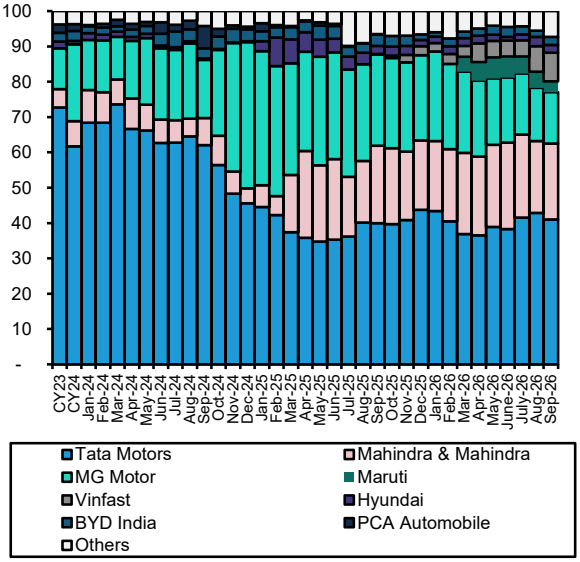

Tata retained leadership in e-PVs, but Mahindra continued to gain ground. Tata registered 14.7K units, up 7% MoM, though its share moderated to 41% from 42.6% in August. Mahindra increased registrations by 14% MoM to 7.7K units, lifting share to 21.5% and widening its position as the clear second-largest player. Together, Tata and Mahindra accounted for nearly 63% of September e-PV registrations. MG remained third at 14.5% share, but continued to lose relevance as its growth lagged the overall market. VinFast and Kia gained share, while Maruti and Hyundai remained under-indexed relative to their ICE-PV positions. The next phase of competition will depend on portfolio breadth, production availability and the ability of traditional ICE leaders to scale their EV offerings.

7. HEV TRENDS AND JAPANESE AUTOMAKERS' XEV TRANSITION

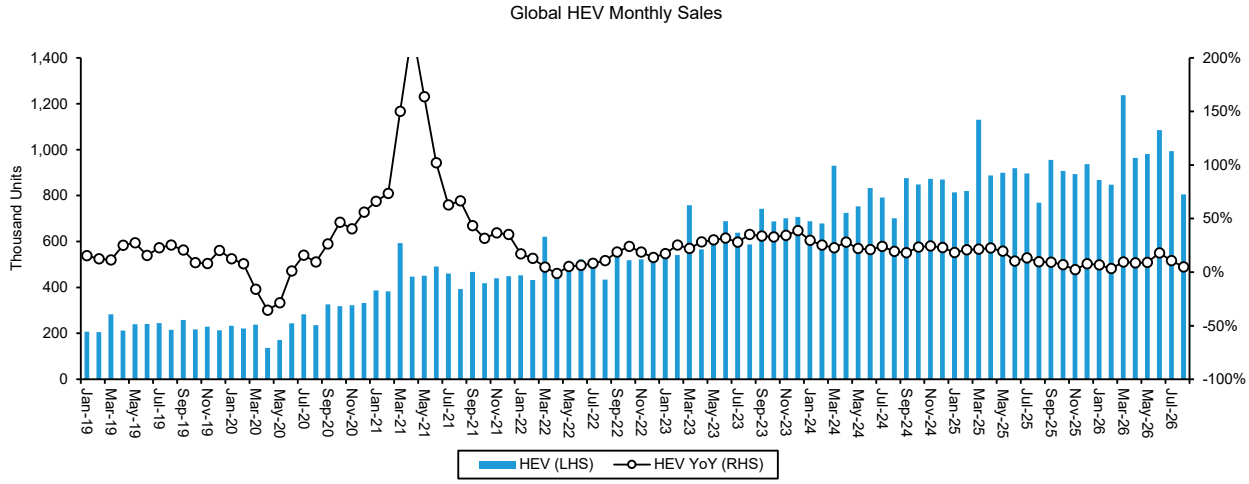

HEV TRENDS

August global HEVs sales were 805 thousand units (+5% YoY, -19% MoM) (Exhibit 50). August HEV sales of Japanese automakers were 492 thousand units (+3% YoY, -15% MoM) (Exhibit 51). Overall, as of August, Japanese automakers have a market share of 61% in the HEV segment (-1.0%p YoY, +3.2%p MoM) (Exhibit 52)

- Toyota's monthly HEV sales recorded 327k units (+6% YoY, -13% MoM, and global M/S of 41%)
- Honda's monthly HEV sales recorded 61k units (-1% YoY, -16% MoM, and global M/S of 8%)
- Suzuki's monthly HEV sales recorded 43k units (-4% YoY, -21% MoM, and global M/S of 5%)

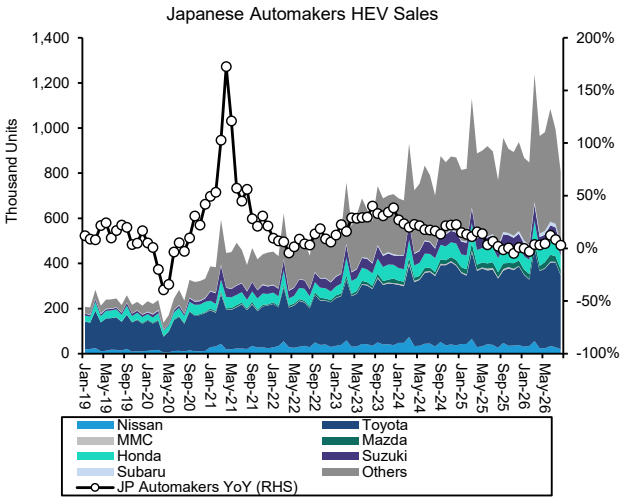

By region, we continue to see relatively strong global demand for HEVs, with volumes +21% YoY in the US (Exhibit 53), +10% YoY in China (Exhibit 56) and +1% YoY in Japan (Exhibit 55), while Europe saw a decrease of -10% YoY (Exhibit 54). Given this momentum, we view the trend as relatively favorable for Japanese automakers and expect it to underpin near-term top-line growth.

POSITIONING OF JAPANESE AUTOMAKERS IN THE BEV MARKET

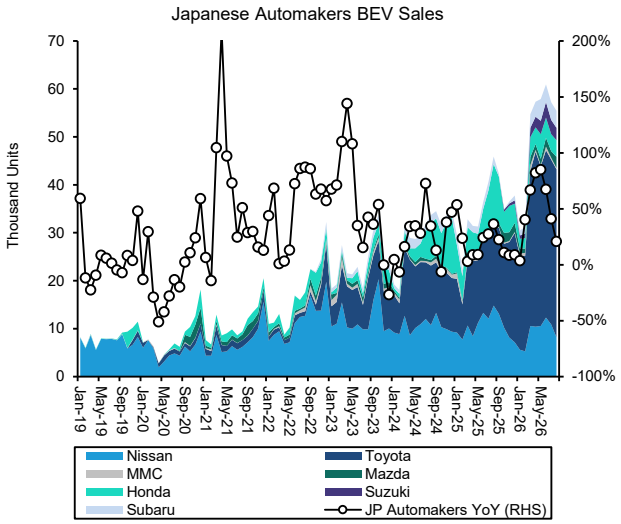

While we project HEV growth to contribute to Japanese automakers xEV sales penetration pick up in the near term, Japanese automakers are aiming to regain ground in the BEV market in the mid-to-long term, by expanding model pipeline to drive BEV sales penetration, including the launch of China-dedicated BEV models (e.g., Toyota's bZ3X, Nissan's N7, etc.). Notably, Toyota has recently been steadily increasing its BEV sales volume to 35,059 units in Aug-2026, with YoY growth of +114%.

August BEV sales of Japanese automakers were 55 thousand units (+21% YoY, -3% MoM) (Exhibit 57). Overall, as of August, Japanese automakers have a market share of 4.0% in the BEV segment (+0.3%p YoY, -0.1%p MoM) (Exhibit 58).

- Toyota's monthly BEV sales recorded 35,059 units (+114% YoY, +2% MoM, and global M/S of 2.5%)
- Nissan's monthly BEV sales recorded 8,190 units (-45% YoY, -25% MoM, and global M/S of 0.6%)

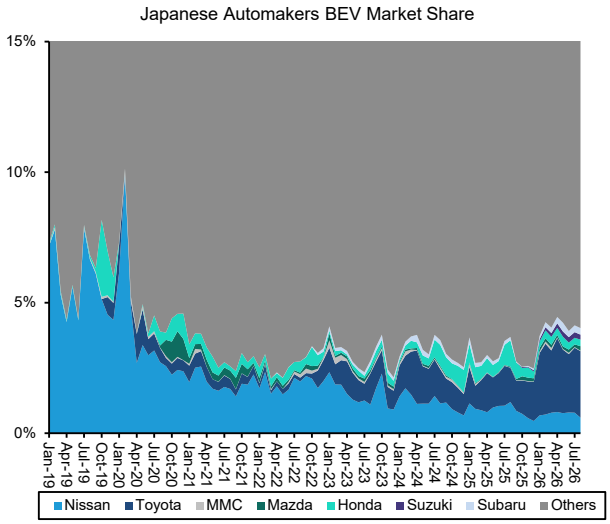

- Honda's monthly BEV sales recorded 3,482 units (-72% YoY, -1% MoM, and global M/S of 0.3%)
