Our Take on FIS Water Acquisition

SPX's acquisition of FIS Water supports its strategic push to deepen and broaden the Cooling platform, adding a highly-engineered water management and control niche that sits directly within SPX's own cooling systems. The core rationale here is that water in commercial and industrial cooling, particularly around cooling towers, is critically important, since poor water quality and solids can severely damage equipment, while FIS's filtration and separation portfolio maintains water quality, protects equipment and extends asset life. SPX views this as an attractive engineered niche, carrying low-30s% segment margins and HSD growth, both above HVAC segment average. The valve and actuator content also complements the recently acquired Neptronic business, advancing SPX's move into higher-margin, controls-enabled HVAC. Financially, the ~12x net of tax annualized EV/EBITDA multiple sits at the upper end of the 8-12x range typical of SPX's acquisition targets, but is defensible given the growth, margin and datacenter mix (which runs higher than SPX's current DC exposure), and is accretive in year one. Overall, this marks SPX's fourth acquisition of the year, brings solid fundamentals, and keeps SPX on a continued path of positive earnings revisions.

- The news. SPX announced it has completed the acquisition of FIS Water, LLC, including certain tax attributes, for total cash consideration of ~$410mm. FIS Water comprises a portfolio of well-established brands providing highly engineered water management and control solutions used primarily in commercial and industrial cooling applications and will be reported under SPX's HVAC segment and will operate within the Cooling platform. Management framed the tax attributes as worth ~$20mm (~2/3 of a turn of EBITDA), taking the net purchase price to ~$390mm. FIS is expected to generate ~$105mm of revenue in 2026, with low 30s% EBITDA margin, implying an EV/EBITDA multiple of ~12.5x, or 11.9x on net of tax basis. SPX will own the business for ~3.5 months in 2026 and plans to provide updated 2026 guidance, including FIS, with 3Q26 results.
- Accretive analysis. On an annualized basis, at low 30s% EBITDA margin, we estimate EBITDA of ~$33mm, implying an EV/EBITDA multiple of ~11.9x on net of tax basis, and annual EPS accretion of ~$0.16 (~1.6% of FY27 JPM) assuming the deal is fully funded with debt at a ~5% cost of capital. In 2026, with only ~3.5 months of ownership, the deal is accretive to the bottom line by ~4-5c, per our simple math below.

- Details on FIS Water. Formed in 2018, FIS Water is a leading provider of highly engineered water management and control solutions used primarily in commercial and industrial cooling applications, along with selected water source and distribution uses. The company is headquartered in Fresno, California and has ~120 employees, and is expected to generate $105mm in revenue in '26 with a predominantly US sales base. Its products protect and optimize cooling systems by removing solids, maintaining water quality and controlling water flow, capabilities that matter because contaminated water can be highly detrimental to industrial equipment, and FIS's portfolio directly maintains water quality and improves asset life. FIS Water is a portfolio of brands, with LAKOS providing centrifugal separators and cooling-tower filtration - the solids-removal product that is directly complementary to SPX's cooling-tower equipment, while Puroflux supplies industrial and commercial water filtration and control systems that complement the separation offering. Superior and VSI are further water management/filtration brands that round out the platform, and VAF contributes automatic self-cleaning filters suited to low-maintenance operation in demanding industrial cooling loops. In addition to filtration, FIS brings a valve and actuator offering that provides flow-control content. This combined with the recently acquired Neptronic business, extends SPX's HVAC controls capability. For context, SPX has always had controls in cooling towers and AHUs, so this is not new ground - but Neptronic plus FIS together represent more sophisticated controls, where management see strong growth ahead in future. Management was clear that filtration and water capabilities were the primary acquisition driver, with the control aspect an additional attraction. In terms of end markets, the vast majority of revenue is commercial cooling - the single largest customer segment, with some application in water distribution and industrial uses. There is significant overlap with SPX's existing customer base, engineering specifications and sales channels, and, importantly, a meaningful datacenter component that is higher than SPX's current sales mix. On growth, FIS has run above HVAC segment average in prior years and is expected to continue growing HSD into 2027. Going to market, SPX intends to support FIS's growth through its global channels, OEM relationships, specification-driven sales capabilities and operating resources. In terms of comps, there is no clean publicly-listed pure-play comp, as the competition varies by product category, with a very fragmented market made up of unlisted players; critically, none which plays across the full sphere. The deal adds ~0.5-0.6x of net leverage taking SPX from ~1.4x pro forma post-Neptronic to closer to ~2x, still a comfortable level that preserves optionality for further bolt-ons.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P.
