

Business trend intact despite supply constraints

Quick Note

Maintain Buy with TP of TWD8,000

MPI hosted a results meeting on 14 August: 2Q26 GM at 58% beat both our/Bloomberg consensus forecasts of 57% due to slightly lower -than-expected unfavorable product mix effect in 2Q (2Q26 GM was still 1pp lower than 1Q). Along with prudent opex, 2Q26 EPS beat our/consensus estimates (Fig. 1). For 2H, management guided 3Q26/4Q26 revenue to grow by 0-5%/5-10% q-q. The upper-end of the guidance range would imply ~55% y-y revenue growth for 2026F, vs. our ~60% y-y growth estimate discussed in July initiation report (vs. Bloomberg consensus of 65% y-y). Updated 2H26 guidance could be below the expectations of a section of bullish investors (likely due to capacity expansion progress, rather than order demand, in our view), though not significantly below our forecasts; the below-consensus guidance could lead to a share price correction. We, thus, maintain our model unchanged, and recommend accumulating the stock as we maintain our theme discussed in our July 2026 anchor report, such as test interface demand will grow stronger along with AI chip demand, many ASICs are ramping up, key players could enjoy some spillover orders, and there could be some price hike opportunities amid a supply-constrained environment, not to mention that the increasing chip complexity is leading to spec upgrade. We believe MPI's probe card capacity remains fully-loaded, and revenue will gradually ramp up along with expansion. Margin should see an upside on higher MEMS portion and in-sourcing ratio. While MPI did not tone up its capacity expansion plan, we maintain our view that the company will grow its VPC/MEMS probe card needle capacity to 10mn units per month by end-2027F (above guidance of 8-9mn), from 5.5mn by end-2026F. We maintain our positive view on the company, and reiterate our Buy rating and TP of TWD8,000, which remains based on 45x average 2027-28F EPS. Our key thesis on the name includes in-house MEMS capability, broad customer base (less concentration risks), and it is a critical provider in the CPO value chain.

Updates on CPO's progress

Investors inquired about the company's progress in CPO equipment and mass production timeline at the meeting. Management reiterated that there could be some equipment shipment for R&D purpose in 2026, while a volume ramp-up is likely in 2027E. We maintain our estimates, and expect revenue contribution to start from 2H27F with single-digit contribution in 2028F.
