Applied Materials (AMAT): FQ326 recap - The eye of the beholder?

AMAT's FQ3 results were good ($9,115M/ $3.50 vs Street $9,020M/$3.42), driven primarily by strong Equipment sales (with Foundry/Logic and NAND above). Services were also above consensus, with Other (which now includes Display) slightly below. Gross margin of ~50.4% was above consensus.

FQ4 guidance was also very strong ($10,250M /$4.02 vs Street at $9,617M/$3.72), well above on equipment and display, and also above on services, with management expecting CY26 equipment sales to grow even stronger than the >30% number highlighted last quarter, with strength in leading edge foundry/logic, advanced packaging, and DRAM (particularly the latter as cleanroom space starts to come online). ICAPS is also turning around with management expecting growth this year as well as next in and out of China (with their China sales overall now expected to grow both this year and next). Gross margins were guided to ~50.4%, flattish QoQ given increased ramp costs, but above expectations.

And yet (as we have seen across a variety of prints this season) the stock sold off despite the clearly strong results, a function (we believe) of simply high expectations particularly following their primary competitors' recent report (though to our eye we thought AMAT's results were just fine). Nevertheless we think there was really fairly little to nitpick at here. Growth is accelerating into an increasingly supportive market with visibility stretching out which the company is positioning their manufacturing footprint to capture (in fact we believe their stated capacity targets could conceivably support a $300B+ WFE market into 2028). They continue to be exposed to the most attractive key markets (leading edge foundry/logic, packaging, and DRAM, all of which should benefit from current industry drivers). Even ICAPS appears to have finally turned the corner. And the shares remain cheaper than peers.

We still like WFE as a good place to be as AI spending continues. And we continue to like AMAT's place in that call. Raising estimates, PT to $700 vs $675 prior (33x vs 35x prior, on avg FY27/28 EPS of $20.98). We rate AMAT Outperform.

Investment Implications

AMAT (OP, $700): Exposure to key inflections is strong & valuation vs peers is attractive.

AMAT's FQ3 results were good ($9,115M/ $3.50 vs Street $9,020M/$3.42), driven primarily by strong Equipment sales (with Foundry/Logic and NAND above). Services were also above consensus, with Other (which now includes Display) slightly below. Gross margin of ~50.4% was above consensus.

- Sales were $9,115M, above consensus at $9,020M and guidance ($8,950M) (Exhibit 1).
- Systems revenue (which as of last quarter now includes 200mm sales that were formerly slotted into the services segment), was $7,040M (up 18% QoQ and 27% YoY), above Bloomberg consensus of $6,955M with operating margins of 38.0% (Exhibit 2).
- By end market, foundry/logic equipment sales were $4,717M (+18% QoQ, +23% YoY), DRAM sales were $1,830M (+6% QoQ, +50% YoY), and Flash sales were $493M (+107% QoQ, -2% YoY) (Exhibit 3). Versus consensus, Foundry/Logic was above ($4,547M), DRAM was below ($2,150M), and NAND was above ($291M).
- Services revenue (which now excludes 200mm equipment sales) was $1,781M (+7% QoQ, and +22% YoY) above Bloomberg consensus of $1,762M with operating margins of 30.1%.
- Other revenue (incl. Display) was $294M (5% QoQ, and +7% YoY), slightly below Bloomberg consensus of $300M with operating margins of -40%.
- By region, China accounted for 28% of revenue (up from 26% last quarter), Taiwan was 22%, Korea 17%, and the United States was 15% with Japan, Southeast Asia and Europe at 9%, 4%, and 5% respectively (Exhibit 4). Excluding Other revenue (which includes Display), China was ~26% of sales vs ~24% last quarter.
- Gross Margins of 50.4% were above consensus at 50.1% (Exhibit 5).
- Opex was $1,501M, a bit above consensus at $1,491M.
- Operating Margins were 34.0%, above consensus of 33.6% (Exhibit 5).
- Tax rate was 11.0% and slightly below consensus of 11.3%.
- EPS for the quarter was $3.50, above consensus ($3.42) and guidance ($3.36) on higher revenues and margins.

FQ4 guidance was also very strong ($10,250M /$4.02 vs Street at $9,617M/$3.72), well above on equipment and display, and also above on services, with management expecting CY26 equipment sales to grow even stronger than the >30% number highlighted last quarter, with strength in leading edge foundry/logic, advanced packaging, and DRAM (particularly the latter as cleanroom space starts to come online); overall they expect these three categories to contribute ~80% of WFE growth in CY26 with a similar profile in CY27. ICAPS is also turning around with management expecting growth this year as well as next in and out of China (with their China sales overall now expected to grow both this year and next). Gross margins were guided to ~50.4%, flattish QoQ given increased ramp costs, but above expectations.

- FQ4 Sales were guided to $10,250M, well above consensus at $9,617M (Exhibit 6).
- Semi systems sales were guided to $7,900M, well above consensus at $7,415M (Exhibit 7).
- Services were guided to $1,840M, above consensus at $1,815M (Exhibit 7).
- Corporate & other (which now includes Display) was guided to $510M, well above consensus at $295M and up ~73% QoQ (Exhibit 7); the company expects this segment to hold around ~$400M/Q through FY27 as well.
- Gross Margin is seen flattish QoQ at 50.4% given increased ramp costs (hiring etc in the factories and field) though above consensus at 50.2% (Exhibit 6).

- Opex is seen up sequentially at ~$1,580M, above consensus at $1,546M on higher revenue outlook (Exhibit 6).
- PF Tax rate was guided to 11.0% vs consensus at ~12.1%.
- EPS is seen at $4.02, above consensus at $3.72.
- Management also suggested that leading-edge foundry/logic, DRAM and advanced packaging will grow strongly, contributing to ~80% of WFE growth in CY26, and having a similar profile in CY27. ICAPS is also turning around with management expecting growth this year as well as next in and out of China (with their China sales overall now expected to grow both this year and next).
- Management noted that CY26 equipment will grow even stronger than the >30% growth guided last quarter. Management also expects sequential growth into Q1, though did not explicitly guide that far out. Into the 2H of the CY they expect leading edge foundry/logic, packaging, and DRAM to be the drivers, particularly the latter as cleanroom space starts to come online).

And yet (as we have seen across a variety of prints this season) the stock sold off despite the clearly strong results (down ~5% in the aftermarket as of this writing), a function (we believe) of simply high expectations particularly following their primary competitors' recent report (though to our eye we thought AMAT's results were just fine). Nevertheless we think there was really fairly little to nitpick at here. Growth is accelerating into an increasingly supportive WFE market with visibility stretching out, which the company is positioning their manufacturing footprint to capture (in fact we believe their stated capacity targets could conceivably support a $300B+ WFE market into 2028). They continue to be exposed to the most attractive key markets (leading edge foundry/logic, packaging, and DRAM, all of which should benefit from current industry drivers). Even ICAPS appears to have finally turned the corner. And the shares remain cheaper than peers.

- Like we have seen across a variety of prints this season, strong results were not enough, and the stock sold off following the report (down ~5% in the aftermarket as of this writing) despite a quality set of numbers. We believe expectations were simply high, particularly following Lam's report a couple of weeks ago.
- Though to our eye we thought the results were just fine, and believe there was relatively little to nitpick here.
- Growth is accelerating (with the company at least qualitatively increasing their annual outlook) into an increasingly supportive WFE market, with visibility stretching out.
- Importantly, AMAT is positioning their manufacturing footprint to capture this upside, with the company suggesting the ability to support a doubling of their quarterly equipment sales by 2028, suggesting close to $64B of equipment revenue capacity by then ($7.9B guided for next quarter, times 2, times 4 quarters would be potential to support $63.2B in annual equipment sales).
- For some context, if one assumed AMAT has (roughly) 20% of the equipment market, this would be indicative of ~$63B/0.2 or well over $300B in WFE in 2028. Our own WFE model at ~$260B in 2028 is not quite that bullish (yet; Exhibit 8) but we acknowledge the possibility.
- And AMAT continues to be exposed to the most attractive key markets as well (leading edge foundry/logic, DRAM, and advanced packaging, all areas that should benefit from current industry drivers. But even ICAPS appears to have turned the corner.
- And the shares remain cheaper than peers (Exhibit 9).
- We still like WFE as a good place to be as AI spending continues. And we continue to like AMAT's place in that call.

Other tidbits:

- FCF this quarter was $2.3B (FCF Margin: 26%) (Exhibit 10).
- Cash return was $860M (Dividend: $420M, Buyback: $440M) (Exhibit 11).

We update our model, and raise estimates. We increase our price target to $700 from $675 prior (~33x from ~35x prior, on avg. FY27/28 EPS of $20.98). We maintain our Outperform rating.
