

ASIA-PACIFIC WEEKLY KICKSTART

MXAPJ closed flat for a second straight week amid higher bond yields, and rising oil prices; we raise MXAPJ target to 1,120 on stronger earnings, while near-term volatility may persist

MXAPJ -0.0%, with Philippines (+4%), Singapore, and Thailand (each +1%) outperforming China A, Korea, and India (each -1%). Banks, Energy, and Telecom. Sev. led, while Materials, Internet/Media, and Consumer Retails lagged. EM Asia ex-China saw outflows this week (-US$4.7bn), driven by Taiwan (-US$2.4bn) and Korea (-US$1.8bn). Bonds and equities sold off on inflation concerns amid escalating Middle East tensions, with Brent crude rising to US$97/bbl, while dovish comments from Governor Waller later eased rate hike fears. US ISM manufacturing disappointed but services beat expectations. In Asia, China's PMI rose as expected, Korea's exports rebounded on tech demand. The 2027 budget outlined a significant reduction in deficit and a reduction in bond issuance. India's GDP exceeded expectations despite weaker manufacturing PMI. Key upcoming data/events are summarized within.

Charts of the Week

Into the home stretch: Following the 3QTD correction, we remain constructive on Asian equities, supported by strong tech-driven earnings growth, attractive valuations in selected markets, and cleaner positioning after recent unwinds. We raise our MXAPJ target from 1,080 to 1,120, implying 26% price upside, driven by higher earnings forecasts, led by Korea and Taiwan. While near-term volatility may persist amid higher bond yields, Middle East tensions, and the upcoming US midterm elections, we see a more supportive backdrop thereafter and highlight derivative strategies for both downside protection and upside participation.

FTSE China and Taiwan Index Reviews: FTSE China 50/A50 and Taiwan 50 will see 2/2 and 1 constituent changes, respectively, effective after 18 September. Together with the FTSE Global Equity Index Series (GEIS) review, we estimate the rebalancing could generate over US$5.5bn and US$2.2bn of gross two-way passive flows, and US$1.5bn and US$1.2bn of net inflows, across the China/Hong Kong and Taiwan markets, respectively.

Q2 Earnings Review: MXAPJ CY2Q/1H26 earnings grew +102%/+71%, with 44% beats vs. 27% misses. Singapore, Taiwan, and Indonesia led, while Australia, Malaysia, and India lagged.

Earnings Revision Leading Indicator (ERLI) signals sustained earnings upgrades at a slower pace; Regional Asia Drawdown Risk (RADaR) model suggests materially lower downside risk following the recent correction.
