July '26 Edition: Further pricing upside amidst LTA negotiations

Upside to 2H26 memory pricing

Based upon our industry checks, we increase base-line DDR contract pricing to +32% QoQ in 3Q26 (was +17%) and +18% QoQ in 4Q26 (was +12%), after +67% QoQ in 2Q26. Depending upon pricing under longer term agreements (LTAs), as well as HBM pricing and mix, the QoQ ASP comparisons will vary though by memory vendor. We continue to forecast the DRAM industry to be undersupplied until at least 2Q28. The gap between bit demand growth in 2027 (+36.2% YoY) and supply (+19.3%) is too wide to close by then. If we assume no inventory digestion downstream in 2027 (i.e., no customers' inventory rebuild in 2H26), then the sufficiency ratio would actually deteriorate to -13.6% from -8.1% in 2026E. Both are unprecedented levels over the last 30 years. As for NAND flash, we now forecast +30% QoQ in 3Q26 (was +17%) and +12% QoQ (unchanged) in 4Q26 after +67% QoQ also in 2Q. We forecast the NAND upcycle to continue til at least 4Q27. Net net, this leaves us forecasting memory industry revenues to reach US$992bn in 2026 and US$1,763bn in 2027. The main risk to this unprecedented upcycle remains affordability by customers, notably hyperscalers which will have to continue to tap capital markets to finance this capex.

LTA negotiations continue

Revised LTA negotiations, which incorporate more fixed terms for volumes and pricing, continue. We see some differences between Micron's SCAs, with price "floor" and "ceiling", and those of the Korean memory makers, which we believe have a portion of volumes fixed (c. 60-70% over a 5-year contract), at fixed pricing, to which a variable component (volume and pricing) is added. We believe Samsung is progressing in completing by 3Q more revised LTA agreements with another handful of large customers. The focus remains on DDR5, for which we would expect a target of 50-70% of volumes being tied up to LTAs. As for SK Hynix, we believe negotiations continue to focus on the larger hyperscale customers for both DDR5 and NAND flash.

Slightly raising HBM demand forecasts, Meta not an issue

We tweak our HBM industry demand forecast to 33.1bn Gb in 2026 (+90% YoY) and 58.7bn Gb in 2027 (+77% YoY) from 32.9/58.0bn prior. We assume HBM procurement equivalent to 8.5mil Nvidia AI GPU units in 2026E, and 11.0mil in 2027E, consistent with our recent CoWoS estimate revision (link). We revise our estimates for HBM-equivalent Google TPU units to 4.2mil for 2026E and 9.1mil (up) for 2027E, also tweaking up HBM procurement for AMD and AWS for 2027. Meanwhile, recent press reports of Meta possibly selling compute to outside customers (link) negatively impacted memory stocks earlier this week. Still, this is likely monetisation of older assets prior to rolling out further Blackwell/Rubin, as well as MTIA capacity (see also note from Steven Ju: link). As such, we see no impact on HBM procurement.

Pullback in memory semis stocks likely temporary

Memory stocks are on average down 17% from their June peak, after outperforming Semis, Tech, and GEM YTD. Some of this could be over-crowding. Yet, fundamentals remain strong, with the memory industry set to generate close to US$1.2tn of FCF in 2027E. We believe this will ultimately lead to a step-up in returns to shareholders. We remain positive on the group, with Samsung Key Call Buy (PT Won550k), and Buy ratings on SK Hynix (PT 3.20m from 3.00m), MU (PT US$1,625), Kioxia (PT ¥132,000) and Nanya Tech (PT NT$495).

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

Investing in the technology sector involves a high degree of risk. Rapid technological changes, increasing competition and exposure to macroeconomic cycles are among the many risks faced by investors in technology stocks. Moreover, it is extremely difficult to project the financial results of tech companies since their operating models are highly volatile and unpredictable. Finally, valuing technology stocks can prove challenging, as neither traditional nor non-traditional valuation measures have provided much insight into how these stocks trade.

Samsung: Some of Samsung's operating profit comes from mobile phones directly (and more indirectly for components) where we see revenue growth for the industry decelerating as the smartphone market starts to mature. The industry is characterized by product cycles, intense competition and requires significant scale and ongoing expenses for marketing/promotional activities. Some of its divisions (Memory and Display Panels) operate in industries which are cyclical and characterized by fluctuations in supply, demand and capital spending. Both industries have commodity-like features – although it is to be noted that the DRAM industry is now operating with significantly fewer players than before. Whilst overall cyclical risks have decreased longer term for DRAM (our "Goldilocks scenario"), cyclical corrections will likely occur. Consumer exposure overall at Samsung is universally high across products, although well balanced in terms of geographies. Strength in the Korean Won vs. major currencies can penalize earnings. Being a large component of the KOSPI, Samsung faces country risks as well indirectly. Corporate governance risks re the Samsung group center around some degree of opacity in decision-making, and limited consideration for shareholder returns (this may change). On the flipside, Samsung Electronics is the "crown jewel" of the group and its interests tend to supersede those of other Samsung companies. We value Samsung Electronics ordinary shares using a 12-month forward target P/BV multiple based on long-term average ROE and cost of equity. Our GDR price target comes from using a conversion ratio of 25 from Samsung ordinary shares (005930.KS) and the latest FX.

SK Hynix: Whilst overall cyclical risks have decreased longer term for DRAM (our "Goldilocks scenario"), amidst significant consolidation (3 players, from 15 in 1998) and lower growth, cyclical corrections will still occur as the sector retains commodity-like characteristics. The NAND flash industry structure has not changed as dramatically, but the coming rollout of 3D NAND flash manufacturing is restraining the players' willingness to add large increments of capacity at 2D. That being said, both segments are sensitive in particular to smartphones/tablets demand, mix within those segments, and to a lesser extent enterprise spend (enterprise solid state drives, servers). The industry also remains capital-intensive, and with contract prices negotiated every 2 weeks to 3 months, cash flows can change quickly – so adequate capitalization is required. Lastly, the industry may have to move to new memory technologies longer term to supplement, if not replace, current silicon-based Flash and RAM memory structures. We value SK Hynix shares using a 12-month forward target P/BV multiple based on long-term average ROE and cost of equity.

Micron: Memory industry is highly volatile. To arrive at our PT we use a SOTP valuation method. Memory has been fairly correlated to global GDP. Therefore from a macro perspective there could be potential downside to our PT should economic conditions worsen and leading to demand destruction. Should ASP declines be more severe than our expectations, there could be more downside in the stock. Scaling both DRAM and NAND is highly complex and risks on the Technology front abound. There could be further downside should technology migration be slower than we expect. On the upside, while we expect ASPs to decline on account of incremental supply addition, any delays to the timelines could moderate the growth of supply and create an upward bias to ASPs and MU. Other risks include a faster than expected adoption of AI driving up memory content in servers and cars.

Nanya Tech: Nanya Tech is a pure-play DRAM manufacturer based in Taiwan mainly focused on legacy DDR products for customers across various end applications. We think downside risks to our thesis could include a potential slowdown in end demand and hence the conventional memory cycle as well as Nanya's legacy-centric product portfolio. We value Nanya Tech shares using a 12-month forward target P/BV multiple based on long-term average ROE and cost of equity.

Kioxia: Our price target is based on PBR. Risk factors include: 1) strong cyclicity of the NAND market and potential price declines following supply-demand equilibrium, 2) reduced demand due to a slowdown in AI investment and restrained semiconductor investment, 3) uncertainty regarding the sustainability of technological superiority, and 4) high profit leverage during periods of price increases.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
