Networking Investor Day Reinforces Accelerating Growth as AI Leverage Builds

We attended HPE's Networking Investor Day in Sunnyvale, California, where the event helped alleviate recent investor scrutiny around a prior Networking outlook that had implied an versus the market. Management raised the FY27 Networking revenue growth outlook to high-teens to low-20% (vs. +14–17% prior) and introduced a new high-teens FY26–FY29 CAGR (or in-line with market CAGR when excluding services) with strong growth across Data Center, Routing, and Campus & Branch, where management expects to outgrow the underlying markets, as well as solid growth in Security. The key incremental driver is HPE's increasing exposure to AI infrastructure investments beyond the traditional campus opportunity, with the company targeting scale-out, scale-across/DCI, and, most importantly, scale-up opportunities, with the announced Oracle (scale-out, DCI) and Vultr (AMD Helios rack, inc. scale-up switch) wins providing initial validation of the company's traction. Management highlighted differentiated custom silicon (as well as use of merchant silicon), an end-to-end portfolio, the ability to combine networking with compute, storage, services, and liquid cooling/rack-scale capabilities, and increasing go-to-market scale as key factors behind these customer wins and the broadening pipeline of engagements. Importantly, the improved growth framework is accompanied by a stronger profitability outlook as well, underpinned by volume leverage and a raised synergy target, which we estimate supports FY28 earnings power of $5-$6, assuming unchanged expectations for Cloud & AI, implying the shares are currently trading at ~12x current levels. We believe the aforementioned highlights an attractive discount at which the shares are trading, particularly against earnings expanding double-digits, before embedding further upside that we believe remains on the table across both the Networking and Compute businesses. Reit. OW.

- Targets Networking revenue CAGR of high teens. The Networking high-teens CAGR for FY26-FY29 compares to a +25% Networking market CAGR (including Campus Switch, WLAN, DC Ethernet Switch, and Router/DCI) over the same period according to 650 Group and a 5-7% CAGR provided by HPE in October 2025 for FY25-FY28. The CAGR is primarily driven by expectations for Data Center Networking revenue to grow at a low to high 50s percent CAGR from FY26 to FY29, relative to a 40%+ CAGR for the Ethernet Data Center Switch market. Meanwhile, Routing is expected to grow at a low to high 20s percent CAGR (vs. 22%+ market CAGR), Campus & Branch at a high single-digit percent CAGR (vs. 6%+ market CAGR), and Security at a high single-digit percent CAGR (vs. 7%+ market CAGR).
- Helios the key driver of the FY27 guidance raise, with potential for further upside. HPE attributed the Networking revenue growth guidance raise mainly to Helios, which is now embedded in the outlook for FY27 (expected to be more back-end-loaded due to Helios as well as Oracle agreement) and beyond, while conservatively not assuming significant market share gains with regards to the opportunity. On that note, HPE announced a $1.2 bn, full-rack deal with Vultr, although management would like to balance full-rack vs. networking-only deals given the working capital requirements associated with the full-rack as

Summary Investment Thesis and Valuation

Investment Thesis

We rate shares of HP Enterprise (HPE) at an Overweight (OW) rating, given its solid position across servers, storage, and networking, the latter of which has been bolstered by the acquisition of Juniper, increasing its mix of higher-margin, less cyclical revenue relative to broader IT hardware equipment. Importantly, we see this as not only providing further headroom for upside relative to revenue and earnings growth over the coming years, particularly with the latter further reinforced by sizable cost synergies, but also driving upward pressure on the multiple that investors are willing to ascribe to the shares, which is set against the backdrop of the shares historically trading at a discount relative to the broader peer group.

Valuation

We are maintaining our December 2027 price target at $70 based on valuing our FY28 EPS estimate at a ~14x target P/E multiple. This reflects a target multiple in-line with the current ~14x earnings multiple, as we anticipate upward pressure amid broad-based strength across both the server and networking demand environments.

it prioritizes its $5 bn+ FY27 FCF target. HPE sized the Helios networking opportunity as more than a billion dollars, with networking tray orders having already exceeded $200 mn.

- Upsizes Juniper annualized run-rate cost synergy target to $800 mn by FY28 from $600+ mn. Management shared it is running ahead of its cost synergy plan while spending less on integration costs, with savings stemming from several areas including SG&A, go-to-market-harmonization, and the elimination of R&D duplicate costs. HPE outlined merging partner ecosystems and completing the integration of commercial systems as the two main integration priorities remaining, with convergence of the partner ecosystem planned November 1st and the first phase of lead-to-cash integration expected to commence in November with the unification of supply chain processes completed by the end of 2027 and additional improvements throughout 2028. At the same time, the FY27 Networking operating margin target of mid-to-high 20% remained unchanged, with the medium-term target of mid to high 20s through FY29 extending visibility.

Risks to Rating and Price Target

Industry Downside Risks

Component cost inflation could compress hardware margins across server and networking OEMs. Key input pricing is driven by broader semiconductor supply cycles rather than end-market demand, exposing device-heavy vendors to cost pressure outside their control. Pass-through pricing defends the dollar margin but risks softening demand if customer budgets cannot absorb higher prices.

Cyclical demand normalization could follow a period of elevated buying. Hardware demand is cyclical, and strength driven by a specific technology wave can pull forward purchases. Any normalization would pressure volumes across the sector once the current cycle matures.

Company-Specific Downside Risks

Large acquisition integration carries execution risk on synergies and margins. Realizing targeted cost savings depends on removing overlapping functions and combining sales and engineering organizations, while the added debt raises leverage. Slippage on either front leaves consolidated margins and cash flow structurally weaker than the deal thesis assumes.

Product and platform transitions introduce adoption and execution risk. Moving customers to new platforms can disrupt near-term demand and pressure margins during the changeover. Delays or weak uptake would weigh on the segments undergoing the shift.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
