

PCB/CCL Update: New Prelim Results from Some Key Local Names

We update some new major PCB players prelim results, including WUS/Shennan/SYE all delivering much stronger NP growth vs other non-AI players. We also include CCL's results, which saw surged NP especially for low-end players ramping up from low bases. Among our coverages, WUS/Sytech beat both sellside/buyside cons, while the progress of next gen material/spec upgrade (e.g. M9/10, PTFE, CoWoP etc.) is crucial for sustained structural growth in dollar content.

Update on several new preliminary results. Following our earlier note (Link) on analyzing the earnings performance for different types of PCB players, we have another update (summarized in Table 2 on next page) given there are multiple key names announcing their 1H26 prelim results. Basically, the AI players with high exposure to high-end products (WUS, Shennan, SYE) continue to deliver strong YoY growth in Q2 NP with solid QoQ ramp, echoing our earlier view on 1) robust order pipelines fulfilled by continued capacity expansion, and 2) limited impact on rising materials cost for these types of names. For WUS, its Q2 NP of ~Rmb1.7bn (at mid-pt) beat sellside cons by 10%, which is also higher than buyside cons of <Rmb1.6bn driven by strong AI-related demand and improved profitability especially in Thailand factory (already achieved break-even in Q2). Shennan/SYE's Q2 NP also beat sellside cons, which at least met buyide cons based on our understanding. For most the remaining names, we see the pressure from both supply/demand is just going on. For example, Redboard saw notable YoY/QoQ NP drop in Q2 (using adj.NP here to exclude a material one-off item) due to limited AI exposure, despite its capabilities in mSAP/SAP-related products. Moving into 2H26, we expect AI PCB names to continue outperforming non-AI names in earnings quality.

CCL players are on fire; Sustainability remains to be tested. We now also include the earnings of major CCL players in this earnings analysis (exclude Kingboard Laminates as of now given it reports in semi-annual basis), as many of them also have announced the prelim results. Unlike PCB names, low-end CCL players are experiencing significant NP/profitability rebound driven by both lifting utilization rate and ASP as results of 1) smooth pass-through of rising upstream materials price hike thank to more concentrated landscape, 2) supply tightness of conventional CCL due to capacity shift toward high-end products by leading globally vendors, and 3) some pull-in orders amidst lean downstream inventory levels. Sytech's Q2 NP of ~Rmb2bn largely beat sellside cons by 40%, which should also be even higher than some aggressive buyside expectations in our view. As the most leading local high-end CCL vendor (though its current AI exposure is also limited), although Sytech's NP growth rate seems not as exciting as other names, we do note the latter are ramping up from low bases (all <5% NPM in 1H25 vs Sytech >10%). For conventional CCL names, we think the supply/demand and pricing dynamics of upstream raw materials are critical for continuous monitoring. For high-end/AI CCL (e.g. Sytech and other global players) as well as PCB names, we consider the progress of next gen material/spec upgrade is crucial, given we only see limited adoption of M9 in this year due to the immature supply chain. We believe any breakthrough in the commercialization of leading-edge solutions (e.g. M9/10, PTFE, CoWoP etc.) in the next few quarters will boost investor confidence regarding sustained structural growth in PCB/CCL's dollar content in the coming years.

Jefferies Franchise Picks will include only Buy rated stocks and the number can vary depending on analyst recommendations for inclusion. Stocks will be added as new opportunities arise and removed when the reason for inclusion changes, the stock has met its desired return, if it is no longer rated Buy and/or if it triggers a stop loss. Stocks having 120 day volatility in the bottom quartile of S&P stocks will continue to have a 15% stop loss, and the remainder will have a 20% stop.
